Guard Fired

One Wilkinson Road jail guard has been fired, a second suspended without pay for 30 days and a third reprimanded, John Ekstedt, acting deputy minister of corrections announced today.

Ekstedt said the disciplinary action came as a result of an inquiry held Dec. 23 into the mass break out of 10 inmates from the provincial jail Dec. 16.

He declined to release the names of the guards, but said the inquiry showed that "in this incident the employees failed to perform their duties appropriately."

He said damage caused by the inmates, who pushed open two bars in the east wing command dayroom, has been repaired and that internal procedures have been strengthened to prevent any further similar incidents.

Nine of the 10 escapees were arrested by police in Victoria, Saanich and Parksville within 40 hours of the prison break, the largest in Victoria's history.

The lone inmate who still remains at large is Peter George MacLean, 24, generally considered by police as the least dangerous of the escapees.

The day after the escape three guards were immediately suspended with pay pending a hearing. They were temporarily reinstated the week before Christmas.

Hal McGillivray, director of corrections on Vancouver Island, said there had been a power failure in the east wing during the escape. It was suspected, though never publicly announced, the inmates had caused the failure by shoving a wet rag into a light socket.

Oliver: Beast Or Man?

NEW YORK (AP) — Oliver has a bald pate even though he's supposed to be only seven years old, and sharp pointed ears like Mr. Spock of TV fame.

He's hairy all over, but more hairy on his arms and legs than on his body. He stands erect, and usually wears a grim expression.

At least, that's what Oliver looks like in the picture released here Wednesday by Manhattan lawyer Michael Miller, who says he purchased the "very strange-looking creature" for $8,000 from an unidentified animal act in an unidentified area in northern New York state.

Miller said he plans to have Oliver put through various tests to determine whether he is an ape or a man-like creature — or even a young Sasquatch.

Miller says he doesn't think Oliver is a Sasquatch, but that if he should turn out to be, his $8,000 would turn out to be a pretty good investment.

He reports that Oliver is four feet, six inches tall, weighs about 120 pounds, and likes fruit, vegetables, cheese and non-fatty meats.

Oliver never walks on all fours, Miller says, and if he sees people sitting and talking, he may pull up a chair and sit down.

But he doesn't join in the conversation, Miller said. He just warbles.

OUELLET GOES TO COURT

MONTREAL (CP) — The laywer for Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet presented three motions today challenging the legality of a Quebec Superior Court hearing called to show why the minister should not be held in contempt of court.

Mr. Ouellet was ordered to appear in court to explain remarks he made about a Dec. 19 verdict by Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay acquitting three sugar refiners on charges of price-fixing.

Mr. Lapointe said he questioned the right of Mr. Justice Hugessen to hear the case in light of the fact that the judge acted as counsel for St. Lawrence Sugar Co. in a 1969 price-fixing case.

At the request of Mr. Justice Hugessen, Mr. Ouellet then sat next to his lawyer, Gerard Lapointe, who presented the three motions challenging the legality of the proceedings.

Mr. Lapointe said he questioned the right of Mr. Justice Hugessen to hear the case in light of the fact that the judge acted as counsel for St. Lawrence Sugar Co. in a 1969 price-fixing case.

North Van. Woman Slain by Sadists?

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman found murdered on the floor of her handicraft shop Wednesday had been gagged and held by one or more persons while she received multiple stab wounds to her throat, police say.

Brenda Young, 38, was found lying in a pool of blood at the back of her shop by Harry O'Day, owner of the book store next door.

"The motive is possibly robbery, but there may be other side motives," said RCMP. He said police have no suspects and called on people who noticed anything suspicious at the shop around mid-day, to come forward.

"Maybe sadism." From the manner of the attack it could be sadistic.

"She was contained by one or more persons and gagged," he said.

There were no signs of a struggle within the tiny cedar shake shop which specialises in local and imported crafts.

Police were sifting through the store's merchandise searching for a murder weapon which Bodnaruk said is likely a very sharp knife.

Her husband phoned and asked me if there was anything the matter because she was not answering the phone," he said.

"She was gagged, lying in a pool of blood. There was no robbery."

"She was very nice, very pleasant. She was not a bizarre character or far-out."

"Brenda, for God's sake, why pick on her," O'Day said.

Mrs. Young and her husband operated an import business, often travelling to Guatemala and Mexico to make purchases, O'Day said. They opened the store on Lonsdale three years ago.

Mrs. Young lived in Deep Cove with her husband, a former newspaper reporter, and their four children — teenagers Heather, Jennifer and Tom and 10-year-old Sheila.

Other acquaintances said Mrs. Young was a very pleasant woman and the last person they expected to be involved in a brutal murder.

Police said an autopsy will be completed early today to determine the exact cause of death. There is no indication of sexual attack, an officer said.

Chou En-lai Death Reported

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese news agency Thursday reported the death of Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-lai, who has been in hospital with a heart ailment.

The U.S. state department in Washington confirmed Chou's death.

The Japanese news agency, which monitors Communist broadcasts in Asia, said the announcement was made by the official Hsinhua Chinese news agency.

Chou was either 77 or 78. The exact date of his birth was not known.

Reuters news agency said in Washington its monitor on an official Chinese radio broadcast from Peking gave the cause of death as cancer.

The Tokyo monitoring was made by Radio Press which said the death was announced by Hsinhua in a Chinese language broadcast. An English-language broadcast did not mention Chou's death.

Although Chou did not see President Ford on his visit to China in December, he had talked in the hospital with other foreign leaders visiting the country during the last year and a half.

Autoplan Premiums In Cabinet Hands

The provincial cabinet met this afternoon to decide the fate of Autoplan premium increases.

ICBC president Pat McGeer said cabinet would be presented with two or three new options designed to soften the blow of previously announced premium increases ranging as high as 200 per cent.

He said it would be up to cabinet to decide what route to take — he would not be making any specific recommendations. And he said cabinet might not come up with a final decision today.

McGeer, who flew back to Vancouver from a brief vacation in Hawaii, told a news conference Wednesday that if one of his new proposals is accepted "there may be a 10-to-20-per-cent reduction in the proposed rate structure."

The minister acknowledged that new proposals were being made because of the public response to a cabinet decision to increase KBC premiums by 150 per cent on top of the 19-per-cent rate increase approved by the previous NDP administration.

The increase announced Friday would mean an across-the-board increase for the average B.C. motor vehicle owner — private and commercial alike — of between two and 2½ times the rates paid for basic coverage in 1975.

McGeer said the provincial government was attempting to alleviate the rate increase by putting forward proposals to the chartered banks in B.C. for an instalment payment plan for basic coverage.

He said the ICBC board directors met Wednesday with representatives of the chartered banks to outline the proposals and was waiting for bids to be made. He agreed that the bank presenting the best bid would have a captive market if the instalment payment plan is used.

McGeer said he was optimistic such a plan could be implemented outside the offices of ICBC and noted "the insurance corporation has no administrative mechanism, by which it could run such a plan on its own. Therefore it will require the co-operation of the banks and other credit agencies in British Columbia."

OLYMPICS BACKS BANNED DRUG

MONTRÉAL (CP) — The Olympic Organizing Committee has endorsed a cold treatment which contains a drug banned by the International Olympic Committee because it is considered stimulant.

Dr. Ted Percy, chief medical officer of the Canadian Olympic Association, said Tuesday Coricidin D, which is produced by Schering Corp. Ltd., contains a phenylephrine compound under the ban. He called it "an incredible situation."

Jean Wenzel, one of Canada's outstanding middle-distance sprinters, was banned for life from international competition because she consumed a pill with the compound symathomimetic amine prior to running in an event at the Pan-American Games in Mexico last October.

Coricidin D is a product officially endorsed by the organizing committee, with billboards and advertisements containing the Olympic symbol and the words:

"Official supplier to the 1976 Olympic Games."

Stow Backs Off

Bill Stow, a senior B.C. public servant who was suspended Monday, cancelled a press conference he had scheduled for today.

Stow, former director of financial and economic research, was suspended for a month and demoted by Finance Minister Evan Wolfe for speaking last month with news reporters about government financing.

He had opened his files to reporters and said the province was facing long-term deficits of at least $325 million.

Stow was expected to announce his resignation.

He cancelled the conference saying he did not want to cause any further disruption. Differences he has with other finance department officials can be resolved, he said.

When the suspension and demotion were ordered Wolfe described Stow as a valuable public servant and said his actions did not warrant a complete dismissal.

The finance minister warned, however, that any public servants who take similar action in the future will be fired immediately.

Special Olympic Tax Eyed

QUEBEC (CP) — Officials of the Quebec finance department have been ordered in recent weeks to prepare a plan for a special income surtax to assure financing for the 1976 Summer Olympics in Montreal, according to Le Soleil.

The newspaper says the tax apparently would be deducted in the same fashion as health-insurance payments.

Employees could face deductions equivalent to 0.5 per cent of their weekly salary while employers could be required to contribute 1.2 per cent of an employee's salary, the paper says.

The surtax would provide nearly $600 million in revenue for the government, about the same amount as has been estimated will be required to meet the deficit in the anticipated $1 billion cost of the Games, Le Soleil adds.

The report says the surtax would be conditional on — and proportional to — any financing obtained by Quebec from the federal government.

Federal funding could eliminate the need for such a tax or reduce the amount required to be raised.

Meanwhile, the Montreal paper La Presse says total Olympic costs will climb to $1.2 billion if the Quebec government's installations board decides to complete the main Olympic stadium after the 1976 Summer Games exactly as forecast in 1972.

The last government estimate put the cost at $1 billion with a deficit of $600 million.

But the newspaper says the gap between revenues and expenditures may reach $700 million.

These figures did not include $200 million in indirect costs expected to be met by the federal government, the provincial governments of Quebec and Ontario and the municipal governments of Montreal, Kingston, Ottawa, Sherbrooke, Quebec and Toronto, where Olympic events will be held.

Despite the trimming of non-essentials by the Quebec government at the main Olympic site in an effort to speed construction, La Presse says the installation of temporary services for spectators and athletes would involve extra cost and as would the resumption of construction following the Games.

Cabinet Studies Premiums

He said such a plan, once set up, would be different from individuals seeking bank loans to cover their insurance premiums because "the instalment plan will be a universal plan in that anyone will be able to borrow part of the funds for paying his premium regardless of whether or not he is an acceptable credit risk by normal bank channels."

Chartered bank proposals for installment payment of premiums should go to ICBC within a week, Bob Kayser, senior vice-president for the Bank of Montreal, said Wednesday in Vancouver.

He said devising a loan program to be effective when premiums became due March 1 is a major task and banks are not yet ready to disclose what form the program might take.

His comments followed a meeting Wednesday between McGee, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe and representatives of seven chartered banks.

Last year, only the Royal Bank offered a premium payment loan program. Operating without protection against defaults, the Royal scheme lost a reported $1 million to $2 million.

Jack Rafts, manager for corporate marketing and development at the Royal Bank, said all loan applications were accepted and no credit checks were made.

About 75,000 motorists took advantage of the program and the average loan was between $150 and $175.

Rafts said the bank paid the premium to ICBC and the motorist repaid the bank over eight months at 12 per cent interest and a small service charge.

He said the system cannot work without controls against default. Spokesmen for the Bank of B.C. and the Unity Bank said smaller banks can absorb the kind of loss suffered by the Royal program could be implemented.

In any case, Ed Clark, deputy director of the board's prices and profits division, said in an interview that most of the proposed increases are permissible under the program regulations.

"There is going to be a 100-per-cent rate increase anyway," Clark said.

Community News

There's a community centre with doors open and ready to serve area residents ... all they need is furniture for someone to sit on.

That's the story for the FERNWOOD Community Association's centre, located in the newly acquired offices, and all it needs is a chair or so, chesterfields etc.

Community worker Marilyn Simes says "as soon as we get the furniture we're ready to go ... but you can't ask people to come out if they don't have anywhere to sit."

Starting off the program in the centre will be a knitting class in the evenings but the starting date depends on when the centre is furnished.

Other programs and courses will be developed as soon as questionnaires are returned. Six LDP workers have canvassed the homes in the area and the forms left can either be picked up or mailed.

In other Fernwood news, there will be a meeting of the Fernwood Community Association Tuesday, Jan. 13, at 7:30 in the association offices on Gladstone.

Also there will be a general meeting of the Springridge Neighborhood Improvement Committee Monday, Jan. 19, 7:30 in the main auditorium of Vic High.

Main item on the agenda will be ideas on how to spend the more than $1 million in federal, provincial and city funds designated for improvement of the area.

A new senior citizens centre in the Fairfield area will open Monday, in the basement of the Fairfield United Church at the corner of Moss and Fairfield.

All senior citizens who live in the area bounded by Fort to the water and Beacon Hill Park to Foul Bay Road are welcome.

The centre will be open from 2 to 4 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Activities include: films, Mondays; arts and crafts, Thursdays; games, Fridays. Only exception is the last Monday of the month which will be set aside for a garden club.

Further information can be obtained by calling Joan Halvorsen or Helen Oldershaw at 387-5117.

Day school registrations are now being taken for those wishing to start in September, 1976. The OAK BAY Parent-owned school on Elgin Street is taking registrations for 3 and 4 year olds and information may be had by calling Eve Macdonachie, 477-8159 or Helen Money, 598-4338.

For the GORDON HEAD Pre-School Co-Operative, they are enrolling three-year-olds and information may be had from Pat Pollard at 598-3081.

Bookmobile services have now been expanded by the Greater Victoria Library to include the FERNWOOD area.

Starting Tuesday, Jan. 13, and continuing every second Tuesday, the Bookmobile will be at the corner of Stanley and Johnson from 3 to 3:45 and at Stevenson Park from 4 to 4:30.

HEALTH CENTRE OPEN

Victoria's first community health centre is open and "already we have had a good response," says Dr. Derek Carroll.

What is surprising about the project is that the centre is attracting people who already have a "family" doctor but have switched, taking advantage of the facilities near at hand.

The James Bay Health Clinic has been in operation three weeks and is also the first to have an expanded role nurse who will assume some of the load ordinarily done by a doctor.

Nurse Anne Boldt and Carroll will be working together, making house calls either together or separately and both will be work as community health educators and resource people.

The centre offers home visits in the mornings with the exception of Wednesday, with office visits every afternoon as well as Thursday and Friday evenings.

The pair will also sponsor a series of health topics in the community school during the winter program with the series featuring films and guest speakers. Topics to be covered are depression, aging, nutrition, heart disease, cancer, birth control, VD and dying.

Registrations for the winter program in the community school will be taken Jan. 21 to 23 and the courses start Monday, Jan. 25.

For those wishing to stop smoking there will be two intensive stop smoking programs, the first is from Jan. 19 to 23 and the second from Feb. 16 to 23.

Guest speakers will be from the Hewitt Research foundation of Michigan and California; president Raymond S. Moore, a developmental psychologist, and Dorothy N. Moore, homemaker and reading specialist.

Both are co-authors of the book Better Late Than Early, published last year by Readers Digest Press.

Lunch is included in the registration fee. Address for registration is Health Education Centre, 3019 Shakespeare St., Victoria, or call 595-4554.

A series of film film programs, which will be held on every second Wednesday until April, will begin on the evening of Jan. 14 at the Central Library of the Greater Victoria PUBLIC LIBRARY at Yates and Blanshard.

The program, which will consist mostly of eight mm films, will be held from 8 in the reference department on the second floor.

There will be no admission charge and coffee will be served.

Anticipating an expanded summer parks program in the Greater Victoria area and in more recreational facilities, OAK BAY parks and recreation will conduct a "leader-in-training" program for young people.

This is for those who have exhibited interest in, and potential for, leadership in community recreation.

The course will cover 16 weeks, two sessions a week from Jan. 19 to May 14. The sessions will be held Mondays and Wednesdays for one group; Tuesdays and Thursdays for the other. The time of meeting will be 5-7 p.m.

An organizational meeting for interested participants will be held at the Henderson Park Recreation Centre, 2291 Cedar Hill Cross Road, Tuesday, Jan. 13 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. For further information, call Lois Powell (co-ordinator), at 595-7946.

Folk singer Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach will give a concert of Jewish folk songs Thursday, Jan. 15, at 8 p.m. in CONGREGATIONAL EMANUEL, 1461 Blanshard.

A world traveller, the rabbi has recorded both in the U.S. and Israel. He lives in New York and has written his own songs.

BAN EASED ON KILLER WHALES

UNITED Church, the Counselling Centre will hold series of eight talks by Dr. Ray Carr on Communications. The cost is $7 each or $11 per couple for the series.

Registrations may be sent in advance to 1520 McRae or accepted at the door.

The former New Democratic Party government established a total and complete ban last year.

"My personal opinion would be that the killer whales should be protected to the maximum," said Nielsen, elected as an MLA in Richmond for the first time during the Social Credit victory Dec. 11 in the provincial election.

The Over 60 Club meeting at 1:30 p.m. will feature vocal soloist Mrs. Fred Higgins. Lieut-Colonel Wilfred Ratcliffe will conduct the devotional period and lead the club in a sing-song.

All senior citizens are welcome to attend. A light lunch will be served following the meeting.

A coffee party was held Tuesday by the BLANSHARD Tenants' Association to welcome newcomers to the government housing complex.

Seven families moved in this past month and this is an opportunity for them to meet the other members and to know what is available for them, socially and recreationally.

The gym program for the children at Blanshard Elementary is continuing with activities Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings. Currently there are boys and girls food hockey teams and they compete with teams from the Greater Victoria Boys and Girls Clubs.

Nielsen also said the government is continuing an inventory of land in British Columbia and is storing the information in computers for future use in making Crown land available for housing.

Nielsen said his department's attitude towards housing is to see "how much of that (Crown) land can be utilized for housing."

"Our efforts will be introduced to see that it is as easy as possible for a person to acquire the necessary land to build a home," he said.

Super-Valu Makes It Up

A Super-Value store in Nelson has agreed to pay $250 in money or food to handicapped people after it violated British Columbia's controls on food prices.

The manager agreed to pay the $250 in food or money as restitution before Jan. 10 and signs indicating that Super-Valu complies with the controls will be displayed in eight stores in the Kootenay area, beginning on the same date.

A public apology will be published in the Nelson Daily News and the Nelson Advertiser, the news release said.

UVic Library Thefts Crimes of Passion?

The figures are included in a report by librarian Dean Halliwell who studied library security services. The losses represent one per cent of the total book holdings.

The section dealing with birth control, courtship and free love has a loss rate of four per cent and the over-all section reports a high 7.98 average book loss.

Although Halliwell draws no correlation between student reading habits and book loss, he does say that the two categories are most susceptible to loss in other libraries also, and others "incidentally include witchcraft and cooking."

Stack collections number nearly 600,000 volumes.

UVic, he says, has three options, if the campus decides to implement a security system to reduce book loss.

Best option is introduction of a Tattle-Tape electronic system, although it involves the highest initial cost, he said.

A complete system including installation of $25,000 sensing equipment similar to that used for airport security is estimated at $114,000, plus $9,000 annually to cover book additions at the projected rate of 50,000 a year.

Books are affixed with special detector strips under the system. A partial system for selected books would cost $60,000 plus $3,000 annually.

The alternative measure would see reintroduction of the security personnel at library exits for $22,500 a year at current wage levels.

Senate Wednesday passed a resolution asking UVic president Dr. Howard Petch to look into the options.

The Dangling Conversation

The storm began to build when Prime Minister Trudeau calmly told a national television audience that the free market system didn't work anymore and Canadians could expect more government control of the various economic sectors. Never in the history of Canada have so many people been frightened by so much interpretation of so few remarks. Editorial writers and newspaper columnists have zeroed in on the statement as though the prime minister publicly embraced atheism. In effect, Trudeau simply stated an obvious fact. The free enterprise system is not working. This is not to say it can't be made to work in the future.

But this one statement, dangled out there in the vacuum of Liberal policies, is causing much ferment across the land. The Financial Times reports that brokers are advising investors to switch to U.S. stock markets until government policy is clarified. The Canadian business community, always suspicious of Trudeau, and even more paranoid after John Turner left the cabinet, feels betrayed.

There is an "I-told-you-so" feeling in the air. The youthful socialist-leaning Trudeau is at last revealing himself, goes the story.

Liberals MPs, including a cabinet minister, are rumored to be considering other alternatives—something loudly denied by Senate Majority Leader Ray Perrault—although former cabinet minister Herb Gray is publicly calling for an explanation to the Grit caucus. Organized labor is also screaming about an end to collective bargaining. All this furor because of a few remarks.

Only a frightened, uncertain country would exhibit such a vehement reaction to these statements. Who governs Canada anyway? Organized labor, the business community?

Are we to force the prime minister's resignation, as some editorial writers believe, to raise the spectre of a different society than the one we now have?

What is really frightening here is that such reaction implies certain choices are unacceptable, not fit for public debate.

The prime minister has not produced a totalitarian blueprint for 1984. He has emphasized that no such master plan exists. Yet the pundits talk as if the totalitarian socialist state was upon us. Brokers tell clients to invest elsewhere.

However, if the country at large can be blamed for nervous nellyism, Trudeau can also be criticized for creating uncertainty. To imply that selective wage and price controls are only the beginning of omniscient government intervention does not elicit cheers from corporate or labor sectors.

In the wake of John Turner's departure from government, the Trudeau administration installed a hastily thrown together package of wage and price controls which even chartered accountants don't understand. To hint that controls, in one form or another, are here to stay adds another dimension to a move originally intended to give the economy breathing space.

The prime minister has a duty to amplify and clarify his recent remarks. Once again he has left the country dangling. The philosopher king makes a pronouncement and then retires to his cave of winds. We are left to debate the meaning of his pearls. It is a primitive and dangerous way to conduct affairs of state. Fifteen months ago controls were wrong and free enterprise would triumph. Now controls are necessary and free enterprise is finished. The prime minister's intellect may be attuned to the pendulum's swings but the national psyche mutters nervously in the pit. We have had enough head games; it is time for show and tell.

Cruel and Unusual...

Solitary confinement abuses in the British Columbia penitentiary detailed in a federal court of Canada case are enough to make the skin crawl. Seven prisoners instituted the civil suit against the penitentiary warden and the crown. In a 56-page judgment Mr. Justice Darrel Head ruled prisoners had been denied protection under the Canadian bill of rights. He termed their punishment "cruel and unusual." Just what effect the verdict has on B.C. pen conditions remains to be seen.

The cruel and unusual label came after it became known that prisoners were sentenced to indefinite periods in solitary. Some had been kept in isolation for more than 1,000 days or nearly three years. As two U.S. penal experts testified such experiences are mentally debilitating and terrifying for the average human being. In fact, indeterminate solitary sentences constitute an excruciating form of torture. No penitentiary director should have the undisputed power to order such punishment, as is currently the case. Other testimony claimed that prisoners were tear gassed in their cells or had guns pointed at them in the exercise yard. Clearly some changes are needed in the B.C. penitentiary system, perhaps the whole federal penitentiary system if the truth were known.

Isolation for special types of prison will always be needed as long as penal systems are a fact of life. Sexual offenders, for example, must be isolated for their own protection in many cases. Disciplinary cases must also be separated from others for a variety of reasons. Still, sentences should be definite. All such cases should be reviewed by an independent committee outside the prison system. Nor should a prison director be able to sentence a prisoner to consecutive terms in solitary.

And if human beings must be isolated from their own kind, the conditions of their confinement should not be so draconian as to drive them mad or turn them into resentful animals. Cruel and unusual are terms sometimes used in the sentencing of criminals. When the same terms are applied to their keepers' methods the system needs massive changes.

JAMES RESTON

Decade of Drift, Hallucination

WASHINGTON — Maybe the first task in the presidential election of 1976, and also the most difficult, is to try to define the qualities of presidential character, intellect, and personality that are best suited to the trends and priorities of the coming years of the 1970s.

A U.S. presidential election is not so much a judgment on the past as a bet on the future. The instinct of the American people for choosing the better of two candidates is as good as any other democratic country's, but historically it is not all that good. There is a long list of tragic blunders in the presidential election record because the people were looking to the past rather than to the future.

The American people, or so it seems here, were looking to the past when, tired of the First World War, they chose Warren Harding over James Cox in the election of 1920, when they chose the visibly dying Franklin Roosevelt over Tom Dewey in 1944, and Calvin Coolidge over John Davis in 1924.

Narrow Margin

You can still, of course, get an argument about all this, but the historians seem to agree that, for whatever reasons, the voters chose the wrong man for the wrong reasons when they elected Zachary Taylor over Lewis Cass in 1848, Ulysses Grant over Horatio Seymour in 1868, Herbert Hoover over Alfred Smith in 1928.

Voters interested in the accidents and caprices of history should read Irving Stone's study of the presidential also-rans, the clearly superior candidates who were defeated, and also the distinguished citizens who were never considered.

"Only by the merest margin," Stone concludes in They Also Ran, "has democracy been able to prove that it has the discernment to choose the best man available for the most important office in the land."

In the last few weeks, the newspapers, magazines, radio and television, confronted by a battalion of candidates in 1976, have done an excellent job of reporting the candidates' biographies, but we still have to try to draw a political map of the future, and a job-description of the presidency that is relevant to a rapidly changing world.

This is clearly a dicey business, but every family, institution, business and government has to make a few assumptions about the future. Some reasonable assumptions, at least for the purpose of debate, can be suggested for the next five years:

It will be a period of new and immensely complicated economic, monetary and political problems between the nations, and among the federal, state and local governments at home.

Accordingly, maybe three qualities will be essential in a president to grapple with these problems—the capacity to mobilize the most flexible and pragmatic talents of the nation, regardless of party, to analyze these puzzles; the political power to get the consent of Congress, and the personal gift of speech to reduce all this diversity of some kind of identity.

A reputation for being a whiz at foreign affairs, and knowing all the personalities in Moscow, Peking and the other major capitals may not be as important in the next five years as they were in the 1960s and early 1970s. The leaders in the Soviet Union and China will probably be gone by the end of 1976, and anyway, the security of the U.S. may depend more on restoring the confidence of the American people in the integrity and efficiency of their own institutions than in anything overseas.

One assumption you can bet on. In the last years of the 1970s almost half of the 215 million Americans will be under 40 and their most vivid political memories will be of controversies of Vietnam, the scandals of Watergate and Chappaquiddick.

This new rising majority of America, searching, disenchanted and increasingly self-concerning and even cynical, is not impressed by the New Deal policies of Senator Hubert Humphrey, the cold war combativeness of Senator Henry Jackson, the amiable good intentions of President Gerald Ford, or the smooth theatrical conservative nostalgia of Ronald Reagan. Maybe they don't know what they want, but they don't want the past, and whatever you think of them, they are a critical part of our future.

In the 1960s and 1970s, Americans have gone through a torrent of change at home and abroad, in which science and technology, popular education, racial tension and the massive growth of the cities, have challenged institutions, social conventions and traditional morality.

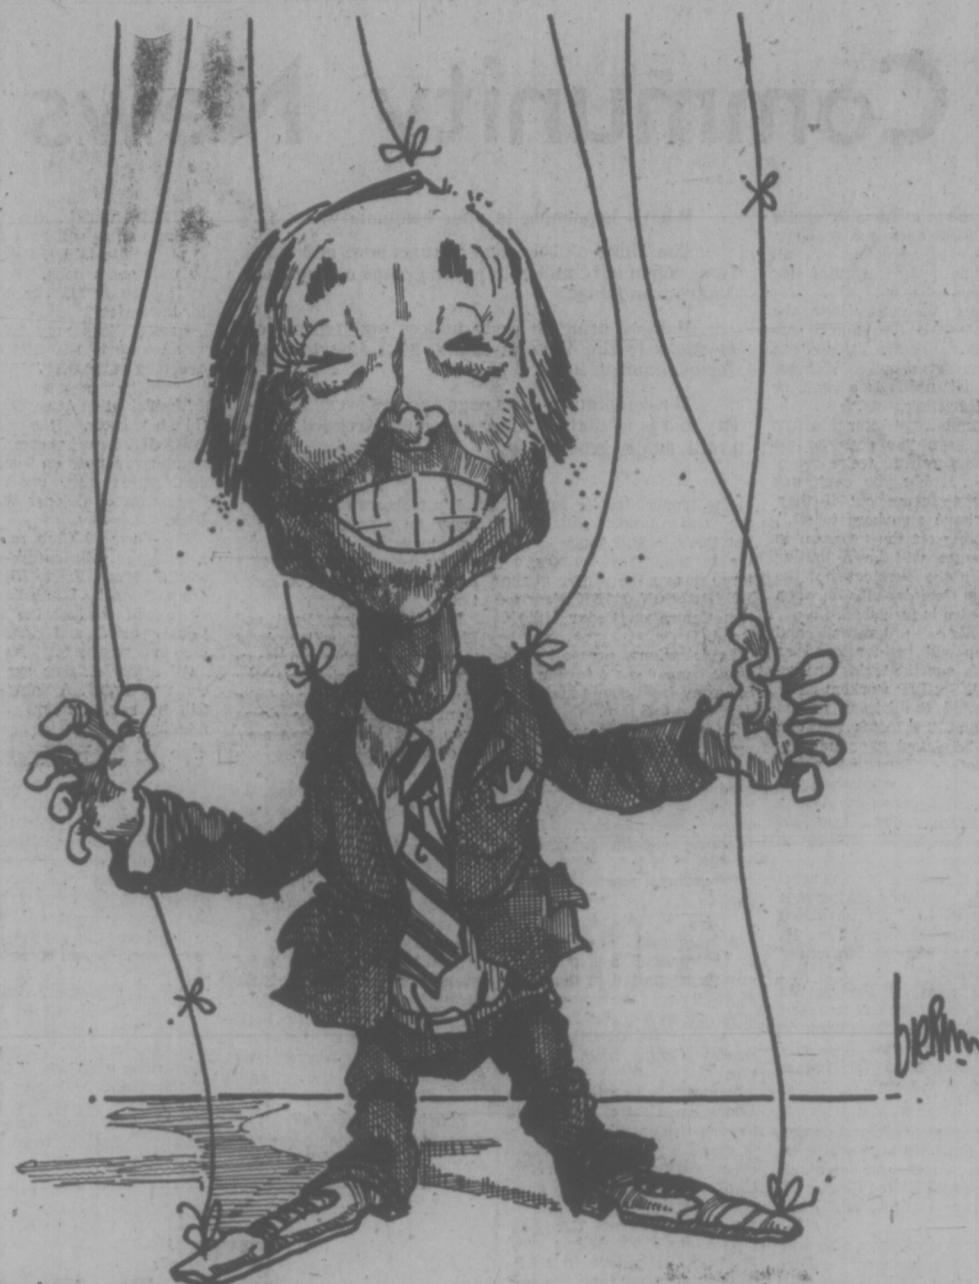

It has been a period of confusion, spiritual bewilderment, and appalling political and business corruption, in which political leaders have told the people that it was their destiny to get more and more material wealth, and that the politicians who promise the most live and rule the longest.

New Populism

But recently, there has been a turn. The most promising trend in Washington at the beginning of the New Year is the decline of political promises. All presidential candidates, except maybe the populist Fred Harris, have suddenly become fiscally responsible, because this is the new popular theme. None of them, however, has come forward with a program, a cabinet, or a philosophy of reconstruction at home that deals with the coming years.

Everybody is for balancing the budget, caring for the poor, driving the wastrels off welfare, making peace with the Soviets and the Chinese, defending Israel without aggravating or losing the oil of the Arabs, but none of the candidates gives a vision of the coming years or demonstrates the qualities to deal with them.

Maybe it is asking too much of the candidates, but if the U.S. is to get out of this past decade of drift and hallucination, somebody is going to have to define what lies ahead and what qualities are needed in a leader.

Punishment

So the Socreds have decreed we must pay double or more for our car insurance this year. We must be punished, it seems, for daring to elect the NDP last time around. And we must be taught a lesson never to be so rash again.

And if human beings must be isolated from their own kind, the conditions of their confinement should not be so draconian as to drive them mad or turn them into resentful animals. Cruel and unusual are terms sometimes used in the sentencing of criminals. When the same terms are applied to their keepers' methods the system needs massive changes.

medical bills pile up, the situation is not in the least amusing. It is, on the contrary, depressing and difficult.

And unemployment, hard as it is on the wallet, is just as hard on the soul, as you knock on door after door, and apply for job after job, getting rejected time after time, though you know how capable you are of fulfilling requirements. I would suggest, then, to the writer that he attempt to put himself in the place of some of the applicants he describes. Surely the facts he provides about them—the variety of their ages, work experience and educational qualifications—dictate a much more sober view of the story.

Unfortunately, as far as jobs are concerned, I (like many others, I am sure) am obliged, by personal reasons, to stay in Victoria, and I do not think the further implication that most people are unwilling to touch off the Third World War in 1975. The Chinese and American leaders will be among half a dozen statesmen to die this year, he said. The others include British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Gen. Francisco Franco and Ian Smith, Rhodesia's P.M."

Abdul sure "blew it," his alleged 85 per cent accuracy just dropped below chance, any school boy with even a cracked crystal ball could logically have done better with the odds of probability. Perhaps one of your feature writers on a slow day might take another shot at this shabby subject just to see who, if any of the world's so-called soothsayers has turned in any better record of performance.

From personal research on the matter it becomes apparent that Abdul is doing no worse than most, but his estimate of 85 per cent accuracy may have been a misprint, should it read 85 per cent inaccuracy?—George W. Beck, Cowichan Station.

Savage Increases

Perhaps it is just as well that the Socred government's true colors are being displayed for all to see so early in the game. At least it demonstrates right from the start to even the most obtuse of the electorate that, as far as the Socreds are concerned, people are of importance only before an election.

Turncoat minister Pat McGeer's punitive automobile insurance proposals constitute, among other things, a sellout to private insurance interests and a direct filip for the already highly profitable money-lending business.

The full consequences of these savage, ill-considered increases are yet to be realized and I wonder whether anyone in the Socred government has given the slightest thought to the effect they will have upon the inflationary pressures which Mr. Bennett has firmly committed himself to fight. — John A. Faulkner, 3420 Quadra Street.

UNEMPLOYED
... why so many women?

Judicious Choices

The juxtaposition of headlines in the Times Jan. 2 was strikingly ludicrous—no slight intended. Mr. McGeer seems to feel that he is perfectly logical in raising ICBC rates 100, 200 per cent and yet he stamps his foot and demands that teachers remain within the federal guidelines.

Am I naive in thinking that federally suggested policies apply to all facets of the provincial community or should I be realistic and believe that the Social Credit government will judiciously choose which groups or organizations that will be subjected to the guidelines and which shall be exempt?

I suspect I should be realistic. — Barbara J. Knight, 506 Pemberton Street.

Job Problems

Your Dec. 30 article, So You Think Jobs Aren't Hard to Get?, disturbed me more than a little. I was not among the 124 unsuccessful applicants for (what was described as) the "lowly" job of copy boy or girl, but I could very well have been. I have two university degrees, am bilingual, have wide travel and work experience, and, like about 75 per cent of the applicants, am a woman. I am also out of work; and, except for two temporary jobs, have been for some months.

I felt that the atmosphere of the article was much in the line of an anecdote—most unseemly for such a distressing report of the unemployment situation in Victoria.

For those of us who just cannot find work and who must exist on unemployment insurance cheques, while debts for such unexpected expenses as dental and willing to seek work elsewhere a fair one. I might point out as well that the numbers of people, having university education, who applied for the job indicates the willingness of these people to take any job whatsoever, not waiting for demands on any specialized skills they might possess.

Finally, I am curious to know why so many of the unemployed appear to be women (as the facts of the article indicate). And, incidentally, how was the successful applicant chosen? — J. Burton, 881 Old Esquimalt Road.

Abdul Blew It

At this time of year the political pundits and soothsayers perennially burst forth with their blooming predictions, which at best can serve as fillers for the unlocked galleries in the composing room. On page 26 of the Times on Jan. 2, in the upper lefthand corner, one Abdul Hafiz Attar of Beirut, Lebanon, stuck out his proverbial neck, with a claim of 95 per cent accuracy in his previous prognostications. Let us re-examine it.

"Mao Tse-Tung will be shot dead, President Ford will die, Australia will disappear in a massive earthquake and the bombing by Israel of Mecca will revert to the Third World War in 1975. The Chinese and American leaders will be among half a dozen statesmen to die this year, he said. The others include British Prime Minister Harold Wilson, Gen. Francisco Franco and Ian Smith, Rhodesia's P.M."

CAMBRIDGE, England — A ward in which the patients sleep on inflated rubber mattresses half submerged in tubs filled with warm water is the latest feature of the fabulous open-air military hospital located here. It was found that many of the patients arriving at the hospital had such terrible wounds that they were unable to bear the pain, and as the constant administration of opiates retarded their progress, it was decided to provide a bath ward where the bad cases could spend their entire time in the water, which is maintained at a constant temperature of 100 degrees. By a system of slings the patient lies on a rubber mattress with his entire body under water, only his head showing above. Apparently, the procedure does much to relieve pain.

A PERVERSED ARCHITECTURE

The $6 Billion Monument

By ADA LOUISE HUXTABLE
New York Times

To the long list of ancient and historic ruins that figure in the annals of architecture, the United States has added a stunning example of instant 20th-century archeology: the abandoned ABM site near Grand Forks, N.D.

The announcement that this $5.7-billion investment in the miscalculations of the cold war is to become a dead installation virtually on completion could keep social commentators busy and bitter indefinitely. But as architectural commentary it is even more intriguing. The implicit message of this group of structures as design and symbolism could occupy a generation of polemicists.

First, the stark engineering composition of severely abstract forms, grimly silhouetted against open sky and flat land, upstages architecture totally. It is without doubt one of the most peculiarly impressive built groups of our time.

Architects trying consciously for impact and meaning might just as well call it quits in the face of this kind of brute esthetic force. Non-architecture wins over architecture, hands down.

The newspaper description of the installation's deactivation delivered the message succinctly. "The huge missile-tracking radar structure that is Safeguard's major landmark — a majestic concrete pyramid with the point sliced off, visible for miles — will become as much a relic as the pyramid of Cheops, and its air intake vents as abandoned as the Stonehenge ruins they resemble."

One thinks also of those giant geometric instruments that the Indians erected to the heavens, or some sinister Necropolis. The effect is singularly, appallingly dramatic, as much by pure esthetic imagery as by chilling evocation.

The modern movement of course, puts a great deal of faith in pure esthetic imagery. And as every student of modern architectural history knows, engineering was praised and promoted over architecture, with particular emphasis on American examples of the early 20th century such as factories and grain elevators. They were invoked as the models of the new architecture, their rational forms equated with truth and beauty.

The engineer's esthetic, Le Corbusier told us in Vers Une Nouvelle Architecture, was "at its full height," while architecture was in "an unhappy state of retrogression."

A new kind of world was to follow the lead of the engineers and of industrialized technology; its artifacts were to be light, airy, mass-produced, and somehow morally superior to anything that went before.

"Styles" were to be supplanted by the sphere, the triangle and the cube; Le Corbusier's description of building as "the masterly, correct and magnificent play of masses brought together in light" was basic to the modernist revolution.

When these abstract forms have the power to evoke emotional response, the reasoning went, then true architecture has been achieved.

"The sight of these forms affects us immediately by their delicacy or brutal-

'Austere, Awful ABM Geometry Is Architecture Of Nightmare'

We are dealing with the death of optimism rather than with the death of art.

All of that engineering elegance and efficiency born of rational, industrialized solutions that was to make a better world — led by the architect — did not bring a new dawn. It brought an era of more gigantic problems in the nature of life and survival than history has ever known.

Next to the reality that produces an ABM, the monuments of architects often seem like arbitrary toys. They know this, which accounts for a lot of desperate posturing; they are increasingly uncomfortable with their unresolved relationships to the social and symbolic realities of the age.

This has as much to do with a current professional malaise as the fact that so much building, in speculative or specialized technological hands, can get done quite efficiently without them. There has been a tremendous upsurge of non-architecture.

Whether the architect is being one upped by the engineer or bypassed by the investment builder, he is being pushed increasingly from the stage by non-architecture of every kind.

He is less central to the scheme of things than when architecture was an academic art and his place as social and esthetic arbiter was secure.

On the pragmatic level, almost every professional meeting in recent years has dealt with the threat of non-architecture in terms of jobs. To compete, the architect has tried to turn himself into a deliverer of computerized commercial services — a role and a set of values more easily understood and more highly prized by society today than a good building. Most recently, he is trying to get it all together by acting as developer.

On the intellectual level, paradoxically, non-architecture has had a noticeable vogue.

First there was the anonymous, ethnic, geographic building recognized and promoted by people and publications such as Bernard Rudofsky and The Architecture Review for so many years — really another aspect of the modern movement's rejection of academic style — from Italian trulli and Dogan huts to the blinding white-washed shapes of Greek island towns. The "natural," or peasant production, as well as the engineer's contribution, was enshrined by the Museum of Modern Art show Architecture Without Architects.

Later came the definition of the spontaneous, American pop landscape and the non-architecture of the highway, the strip and the tract house and motel by Robert and Denise Scott Brown Venturi and Herbert Gans.

This is the architectural counterculture in which the dumb-and-ordinary is celebrated and the monument is taboo. It is not accepted by the modernist establishment. But both establishment and anti-establishment non-architecture have an elite cachet.

On still another level, those who see architecture primarily as a social act have espoused a kind of non-architecture that deals more with qualities of amenity and environment than with art. The way a building serves the processes of life takes precedence over sophisticated esthetic skills.

Non-architecture has come a long way since it was raised as the antithesis of academic style and the banner of revolution more than a half century ago.

It would no longer be possible, in the name of non-architecture, for Bruno Taut seriously to redesign the Alps, a perfectly acceptable exercise at a time when improving nature was as legitimate an aim as improving life, and all you needed was a manifesto to make it so. Who now would have the innocent architectural arrogance to re-crown a peak or remake a valley with "walls erected on hillsides out of colored glass in rigid frames, light shining through a variety of changing effects, as much for those in the valley as for the pilots of aircraft overhead?"

Christo wraps mountains today, but it's not the same thing. And a less-than-earth-shaking avant garde issues manifestos denouncing any form of architectural practice at all.

In 1919 Bruno Taut could say, "My torch dazzles me, but I am determined to carry it." In 1975 the austere and awful geometry of the abandoned ABM is an architecture of nightmare, not of dreams.

We Didn't Want to Be Told

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

More than the usual number of people want to hang our prime minister this week, mostly because he insists on treating us voters as adults when we would secretly prefer to be coaxed as children.

Show us political leaders who will promise more benefits with less taxes, more freedom with more laws, more services with fewer bureaucrats and a gold-plated weather vane for every barn and, in spite of all our previous disappointments we have the impulse to cluster around that man like chicks under a hen.

A political leader who suggests that large problems demand hard decisions and that we ourselves must do the deciding is a disturbing man, unsettling and usually unpopular.

Prime Minister Trudeau again transgressed the old political etiquette during the holiday season by talking in a TV interview in the same way he might talk to his cabinet colleagues in a secret meeting on Parliament Hill, and it is this very plainness of speech which has caused the current clackaw.

What were the awful things he said?

On examination of the text, the statements seem mild. Most of them were not predictions of things to come but a cold and dispassionate review of what has already happened.

The prime minister said that the free market system hasn't been working. This is news?

The free market was a theory of an economist named Adam Smith. It was put partially into practice in the last century but by 1900 the governments of all industrial nations were intervening in this system and all have done so increasingly ever since.

The prices of non-agricultural goods that you and I buy are determined only to a minor degree by the force of competition. The more important factors are what unions shall demand and get as wages and what the private decisions of corporate managements may be.

In the United States President Teddy Roosevelt tried trust-busting three quarters of a century ago in an effort to release some natural competitive forces for the consumers' benefit. Only a very sheltered individual could believe today

France Kicks Out Immigrants To Open Up More Manual Jobs

By WALTER SCHWARZ
Manchester Guardian

PARIS — France is preparing to send its unemployed immigrants back where they came from, with fares paid and a going away present equivalent to several months' unemployment pay. The new policy is just beginning, and is being launched without ceremony. The aim is to make a modest start next summer, with 15,000 assisted repatriations before the end of the year, followed by much larger numbers after that.

The policy was mentioned only in passing, and vaguely, by Paul Djoudj, the official in charge of immigrants at the ministry of labour, in a report to the cabinet a fortnight ago. But one of his aides gave more details of what he called "policy of return."

He said that the only reason for the slow start was the need to negotiate terms with UNEDIC, which runs French unemployment benefits. The idea is to commute an immigrant worker's outstanding benefits of up to a year in one lump sum, to help him on his way home. Once the details are agreed, parliament will have to approve the scheme.

The immediate reason for the new policy — which runs counter to the traditional French dependence on immigrants to do the chores of an industrialized society — is the recession which has put many immigrant workers are also out of a job.

Earlier Retirement

But the policy has deeper origins in President Giscard d'Estaing's aim to upgrade manual work. The immigrant population, now more than four millions, is 7.7 per cent of the population of France. In the last two decades, as the economy boomed, the Algerians, Portuguese, Africans, and others took on more and more of the menial jobs, and those requiring longer hours and harder physical work.

But the recession and unemployment has reduced arrivals to a trickle — and given a new edge to racist feeling which all along has been the reverse side of the coin. Levy claims in his latest annual report that "France has become the most murderously racist of countries."

I was told the government has already had talks with

Portugal, Algeria and Tunisia, three of the main immigrant sources, on a movement of return geared to these countries' own development plans — according to the ministry official — and aided by a special program of "re-education to adapt the workers to the culture and economy of their home countries." Some 1,500 volunteers are to be trained next year to run adaptation courses lasting from three to six months.

Plan Under Wraps

The plan has had only muted reaction because little of it is known. Albert Levy, Secretary of the Movement against Racism, Anti-Semitism, and for Peace, a leading champion of immigrants' rights, had heard no details of the plan.

"Getting rid of immigrants considered in any way troublesome is not new," he said. "And that often includes anyone who speaks enough French to stand up for his rights. People sometimes have their visas revoked for trivial offences, such as driving through a red traffic light. For three years there has been a policy of not renewing visas if people are unemployed for more than three months."

France has had a tradition of keeping its doors open — if never fully open — to its ex-colonials. The immigrant population, now more than four millions, is 7.7 per cent of the population of France. In the last two decades, as the economy boomed, the Algerians, Portuguese, Africans, and others took on more and more of the menial jobs, and those requiring longer hours and harder physical work.

But the recession and unemployment has reduced arrivals to a trickle — and given a new edge to racist feeling which all along has been the reverse side of the coin. Levy claims in his latest annual report that "France has become the most murderously racist of countries."

I was told the government has already had talks with on the bottom rung, they have been the first victims of unemployment. While the number of unemployed Frenchmen grew by 88 per cent between the summers of 1974 and 1975, the rise for immigrants in the same period was 167 per cent. Immigrants on national assurance had risen by 223 per cent — again twice the rate as that for Frenchmen.

Immigration has always had its seamy side. It was described with distinction in this year's Goncourt Prize winning novel La Vie Devant Sol, by Emile Ajar. Its hero, an Arab orphan boy, grows up in one of the immigrant slums that ring Paris and a dozen other towns and have become centres of vice and crime as well as poverty and oppression.

Hard times make racism worse. A succession of atrocious stories have filtered through to the press in recent months, of police brutalities, of immigrants shot or beaten to death in one-sided encounters that were later covered up.

The law often takes a back seat — as was shown a year ago when it became known that police in Marseilles operate an illegal detention centre where unwanted immigrants are kept for months at a time before being deported. There was a mild fuss in parliament, and a denial. But the centre is still there.

Children Abroad
"We campaign for immigrants to have the same treatment as unemployed Frenchmen," said Levy. He argues that the French government spends only minimal amounts on immigrant housing and other benefits — which are, in fact, financed by the immigrants themselves.

Immigrant clients of the social services normally have their children abroad and do not benefit from generous family allowances although they pay the same contributions. The difference is sup-

Rotation Policy

While some workers are left sent home as unemployed, others are still coming in at the request of large firms needing manageable labour. "It's a policy of rotation — bringing in new ones and getting rid of old ones as they learn to speak French and start asking awkward questions." Militants threatened with deportation often face imprisonment back home where they are known as political dissidents.

How many immigrants will leave under the new policy depends entirely on the economic situation in 1977, said the official in the labour ministry in charge of the policy. At the moment, signs of the economy picking up are few and precarious. President Giscard d'Estaing plans further progress in upgrading manual work.

His economic adviser recently suggested the aim was to "abolish" the labouring classes. Will there then be a place for immigrant workers in the "advanced liberal society"? If not the burden will have to be thrown back to Portugal, Algeria, black Africa and other places.

Yet it is hard to imagine Frenchmen once again sweeping their own streets and collecting their own rubbish.

B.C. Mining Optimism Fading

By AL FORREST

This was supposed to be the year of the great recovery for the mining industry but it looks like it will have to wait until 1977, says P. R. Matthew, secretary-treasurer of the Mining Association of B.C. "It is very disappointing," he said.

This will interrupt cash flow and will force companies to borrow funds to pay their costs. The matter has not yet been resolved.

The surtax is part of the federal government's anti-inflation program and is designed to prevent companies from getting windfall profits while other groups in society are under controls. The excess revenue from exports will be held in trust by the government and may or may not be returned to the company, depending upon the extent of profit it represents.

Matthew said the industry continues to be concerned about the federal government's resource taxation policies which prohibit companies from writing off provincial taxes as a cost against federal taxes.

This double taxation was an attempt by Ottawa to get provincial governments to reduce their taxes on resource industries. The matter has not yet been resolved.

The resource tax and the new export surtax, along with a recent statement by Prime Minister Trudeau that the free market system has not worked in Canada, have made foreign investors wary about new ventures in British Columbia.

Stell production has declined in Japan, the main market area, and prices and volumes are expected to become stabilized at present levels for most of 1976.

The mining industry is pleased the royalties will be removed from metal production but hopes the principle will apply to coal.

(Premier) Bennett has indicated the $1.50 per ton coal royalty will stay and may go higher. The NDP planned to increase it to $2 this year.

The B.C. mining industry generally favors the Ontario mining tax system, with some modifications. The B.C. government plans to study the Ontario tax structure before bringing in its own revised tax program.

"You could sum up our feelings by saying we are disappointed about the prospects for 1976 but optimistic over the longer term," Matthew said.

Metal prices continue to be low and the outlook this year is not bright.

Copper is selling for 53.5 cents a pound up from a recent low of 52 cents but far below the estimated break-even level of 60 cents a pound.

B.C. companies were hoping for a strong market recovery this year but the latest forecasts are that the price might not go much above 60 cents a pound and demand will be weak for most of the year. Most nations have large stockpiles of copper.

Market conditions will also be weak for molybdenum, lead and zinc for most of 1976. Prices for silver and gold will remain below their peaks of the 1973-74 boom. The market for gold and silver is steady but it is a byproduct of other mining and volumes are small.

Cod, which was the single bright spot in the 1975 mineral picture, will not experience the sort of growth it enjoyed during the past 12 months.

Coil, which was the single bright spot in the 1975 mineral picture, will not experience the sort of growth it enjoyed during the past 12 months.

Meanwhile, there is little incentive for existing companies to expand in B.C. this year, despite the change in government.

We've got a good thing going: Fifty years of firsts.

On April 17, 1926, a biplane took off from Los Angeles. It was headed for Las Vegas and Salt Lake City. And it was also headed for history.

Because in the mail sacks in the front compartment of that Douglas M-2 was the very first airmail ever flown east from Southern California.

And on the tail of that plane was the name of the company flying the mail: Western Air Express. It was a brand-new airline with only six planes in its fleet. And although no one knew it at the time, it had a big future ahead of it.

That company today is Western Airlines, the oldest continuously-operated airline in the United States.

The first "first."

Flying Los Angeles' first airmail was only the start of a long list of "firsts" Western brought to aviation.

For instance, those in-flight meals we all take for granted nowadays? Western served the very first ones in the U.S. They weren't elaborate, but they were good, served by the country's first flight attendants.

We also flew the very first regularly scheduled flights between

Los Angeles and San Francisco. And to do it, we introduced the first tri-motor plane to the U.S., the Fokker F-10.

As we grew, so did our aircraft. By 1930 we bought two 32-passenger Fokker F-32's, the four-engine giants of their day. Their unveiling was a big event, with chorus girls dancing on the planes' huge wings.

(Unfortunately, that day was the high point of the planes' career. They turned out to be uneconomical and eventually Western sold them. Ironically, one of them ended up as a gas station on Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles.)

High-flying radio.
Air-to-ground two-way radio was developed by Western's director of research, Herbert Hoover, Jr., in collaboration with Boeing Air Transport.

We made history again in 1932 with the world's first TV reception in a plane. A tri-motor Fokker F-10 carrying members of the press received the historic television image in the skies over Los Angeles.

There have been a lot of Western "firsts" since those early days—like the first reduced fares for children, the first automatic reservations system.

And with the inauguration of Western's Champagne Flights, the first complimentary Champagne served on flights in the United States. (We started that custom over twenty years ago and it's still going strong.)

A current first we're proud of—the best on-time record of any major U.S. airline for the last three years.* No one's ever come close to that.

And the latest figures look like 1975 will make it four in a row.

America's first half-century airline.
But maybe the most important first to us at Western is that we're the nation's first airline to celebrate its Golden Anniversary. Because having the support of the American people for all these years means that you think we've had a good thing going all along.

And our birthday promise to you is that we intend to keep it that way. Fly with us and see.

Reay Flays Soviet Ref

CHICAGO (CP) — The outcome of Wednesday night's hockey game between Chicago Black Hawks and Wings of the Soviet was obvious. Boris Kulagin was smiling.

The usually stoic-faced mentor of the Soviet team managed to beam a smile—if only momentarily—after his team beat the Hawks 4-2 in the hardest-hitting game yet in the eight-game series of the two touring Soviet clubs against National Hockey League teams.

On the other side of Chicago Stadium, things weren't so joyful. Chicago coach Billy Reay sat in his office adjoining the Hawks dressing room, maintaining all along that the outcome of the game was decided after Sunday's 12-6 thumping by Buffalo Sabres.

"Take a look at the penalties," said Reay. "It looks as though they had a meeting after the game Sunday and decided to make this one all Russian."

Reay had some harsh words for Soviet referee Yuri Karandin, who also refereed the game in which Red Army—the other touring Soviet team—beat New York Rangers 7-3 in the opening game of the series.

In all, the Black Hawks were assessed 12 minor penalties, compared with six against the Wings.

Dick Redmond, who along with Dennis Hull scored the Chicago goals, was called for elbowing and cross checking.

Dale Tallon went off for slashing, Grant Mulvey had elbowing and cross checking penalties and even Stan Mikita, the usually mild-mannered captain of the Hawks, was driven to near fistfights on a number of occasions.

Redmond, who has only 19 minutes in penalties in 39 games this season, had four or five near fights with Soviet players. In the third period he was given a fighting minor for throwing punches at Vladimir Shadrin.

"I expected a rough game from them, but nothing like this," he said. "It was a matter of protecting yourself out there."

Kulagin begged to differ with Redmond and Reay's assessment of the officiating.

"I think the referee did a good job," Kulagin said. "He helped keep the fights down."

"If they (the Black Hawks) play rough with us, we will always be able to beat them."

Kulagin said his goaltender, Aleksandr Sidelnikov, played a strong game after a weak performance on Sunday.

"He did not play so well in Buffalo. After the game he drew necessary conclusions from himself, and improved."

Sidelnikov faced only 18 shots and looked weak on Redmond's goal, a 50-footer which eluded him on the right side.

Tony Esposito handled 30 shots in the Chicago net.

Three of the four Soviet goals came on power plays, all of them on point-blank shots.

Yuri Tyerhini opened the scoring for the Wings at 8:46 of the first period with Darcy Rota off for his first of two cross-checking penalties. Redmond tied the game just 25 seconds later.

The Wings scored three unanswered goals in the second with Sergie Kapustin, Victor Shalimov and Yuri Ljapkin connecting.

Hull scored the only goal of the final period before an overflow crowd of 18,500.

Red Army, who have a 3-3 tie with Montreal Canadiens along with their win over the Rangers, play Boston Bruins tonight before concluding their series Sunday afternoon with a game against the Stanley Cup champion Philadelphia Flyers.

First Period 1. Wings 1; Tyerhini (Yakushev, Ristopolski); 8:46. 2. Chicago 1; Redmond (Mulvey) 9:13. Penalties — White (C) 3:21; Rota (C) 7:41; Redmond (C), Raskin (W) 20:25.

Second Period 3. Wings, Kapustin (Raskin, Kuznetsov) 4:03. 4. Wings, Schalimov (Tyerhini, Ljapkin) 8:41. 5. Wings, Ljapkin (Turin, Pakshov) 17:13.

Penalties — Russell (C) 7:57; Raskin (W) 10:18; Talyshov (C) 18:22; Russell (C) 18:27; Kapustin (W) 0:25; Redmond (C) 9:31; Schalimov (W) 10:18; Mulvey (C) 16:22; Tyerhini (W) 17:38.

Third Period 1. Chicago 1; Hull (Mikita, Mulvey) 7:44. Penalties — Rota (C) 5:35; Redmond (C) 13:28; Mulvey (C) 18:18. Shots on goal: Wings 30; Chicago 29. Goals: Sidelnikov, Wings; Esposito, Chicago. Attendance — 18,500.

THAT VLAD FEELING is experienced by Vladimir Rasko of Soviet Wings after being crunched against boards by Dick Redmond (15) of Black Hawks during hockey game

Wednesday night in Chicago. Redmond escaped without penalty on this play, but Hawks were hit with total of 12 penalties in rough contest and dropped 4-2 decision. (AP Wirephoto)

Ferguson Promises An Improved Image

NEW YORK (AP) — John Ferguson's first executive decisions as general manager of New York Rangers were to fire coach Ron Stewart and name himself interim coach of the floundering National Hockey League club.

"I'll name my coach at the end of the year," said the 37-year-old former left winger for Montreal Canadiens after signing a multi-year contract and becoming the league's youngest general manager. "I'll be looking for a coach. I've got some people in mind."

Ferguson promises to improve the team's image before he's through.

"You don't have to hit all the time to win," he said after taking the job he turned down last May before New York hired Stewart. "But you've got to hit to have some respect. You get respect from hitting."

Hitting and the adaptation of techniques used by Russian hockey teams will be the theory behind Ferguson's practice as he takes over the coaching reins from Stewart and the general manager's chair from Emile Francis, who was relieved of Tuesday night after 11 years of service.

"It's going to be a tougher hockey club," said Ferguson, who was plenty tough himself during an eight-year career in which he scored 145 goals, a d d e d 158 assists and amassed 1,214 penalty minutes.

Ferguson, out of pro hockey since his retirement after the 1970-71 season, had been doing color commentary on the current Soviet-NHL series before the opportunity arose to return to the sport. During the first Canada-Russia series in 1972, he served as an alternate to Team Canada coach Harry Sinden.

In league action, the show was on the other foot — for the Philadelphia Flyers and it hurt Flyer coach Fred Shero. Shero complained about the rough-house tactics of the Toronto Maple Leafs in a 7-3 Philadelphia victory. Shero said the Leafs tactics verged on mugging and that Lanny McDonald and Dave Williams should go to jail for "attacking our guys from behind."

McDonald jumped on Bill Barber's back in the second period and hit him often enough to earn a double minor and in the third period Williams wrestled Dave Schultz to the ice where he was pounded by Ian Turnbull.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens edged Minnesota North Stars 2-1, Los Angeles Kings defeated Kansas City Scouts 5-2 and California Golden Seals defeated Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1.

LASER ENDS GUESSWORK

NEW YORK (AP) — A laser beam which will take the guesswork out of spotting the football will be used in a major game for the first time in the Senior Bowl at Mobile, Ala., Sunday. It will, among other things, eliminate the necessity of bringing in the chains to measure for first downs.

The National Broadcasting Co., which will telecast the game, announced Wednesday that the electronic accoutrements will be used to substitute for the referee in certain instances.

The apparatus will be used to spot the ball starting each series of downs, replace it after an incomplete pass, determine first downs and step off correct yardage. It will not in any way serve to settle disputes on controversial plays.

It also will be used in placing the ball on the hashmarks, spotting it within a fraction of an inch of the correct position.

Civics Prove Success At Gate, but Not on Ice

By The Canadian Press
At least Ottawa Civics have somebody to care about them now when they lose.

The Civics, used to playing in privacy at home when they were Denver Spurs, had 8,457 enthusiastic fans on hand to watch them bring the World Hockey Association back to Ottawa.

Still, the Civics were the same hockey players as they were when they were representing the Colorado metropolis and their success stopped at the box-office.

Buried in last place in the over-all WHA standings, they played one of their better games of the season, but still dropped a 3-2 decision to New England Whalers.

In Wednesday's other WHA games, Calgary Cowboys 3-1, Winnipeg Jets trounced Toronto Toros 8-2, Minnesota Fighting Saints edged Phoenix Roadrunners 7-6 and Cleveland Crusaders whipped San Diego Mariners 8-3.

The Whalers were outshot 34-20, but clutch goaltending by Christer Abrahamsson and Tom Webster's 23rd and 24th goals of the season gave them the win and a four-point edge over second-place Cincinnati Stingers in the Eastern Division standings.

Paint-Tossing Brings Charge

Times News Services
Two men and one woman have been charged with throwing bags of paint onto the ice during an exhibition hockey game Wednesday night between Providence Reds of the American Hockey League and Moscow Spartak in Providence.

The paint, mixed with a chloride to dissolve ice, splashed the area near the Soviet team's goalie. Officials reported the paint sprayed several spectators but did not hit the players.

Police say Mordechai Scher, 18, of Stamford, Conn.; Linda Fisch, 22, of New York, and Sarah Sohne, 23, of Huntington, N.Y., were scheduled to be arraigned today on charges of disrupting a public assembly.

An unidentified man told the Providence Journal-Bulletin the paint-throwing was a protest against treatment of Jewish citizens in the Soviet Union.

The Russian team defeated Providence, 8-5. Wednesday's game marked the third win as many starts against AHL opponents for the Russians. Spartak is scheduled to play at Hershey, Pa., Friday night in the final game of its AHL tour.

GNP Statistics Cut Optimism

OTTAWA (CP) — Previous evidence of economic recovery received a setback Wednesday with the release of figures showing the total production of the domestic economy declined in October.

Statistics Canada reported that the index of real domestic product dropped three-tenths of one per cent from September.

This represented a downturn after two quarters of growth in the gross national product (GNP), a similar but more widely used measure of production by the national economy.

GNP, compiled quarterly, showed growth of three-tenths of one per cent in the second quarter of 1975 and one per cent in the July-September quarter. This followed a decline in the GNP for four successive quarters, the worst since the 1930s.

The Statistics Canada spokesman said the October decline in the real domestic product, measured monthly, casts doubt on whether the 1976 fourth-quarter GNP will show continued growth.

However, he said it is not possible to make accurate predictions on the basis of the single month's figures.

The October decline was attributed primarily to output in the forest industry, which was down 2.5 per cent, a decline of four-tenths of one per cent in the manufacturing sector and a three-per-cent drop in the communication industry.

The main contributors to the manufacturing decline were drops in production by pulp and paper mills, hit by widespread strikes which are continuing, and in production by motor vehicle manufacturers.

The agency said the sharp drop in forest production was due to reduced output by sawmills and also reflects the drop in pulp and paper production.

The drop in the communication sector was attributed to the national postal strike, which lasted from Oct. 21 to Dec. 3.

Mining dropped 1.8 per cent due to a decline in coal production and reduced output of crude oil and natural gas. Iron mines increased their output, however.

The transportation industry was up seven-tenths of one per cent but the storage industry dropped 1.4 per cent.

In manufacturing, there were significant declines in processing of meat products,

Record Loadings

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Railway loaded a record 11,534 cars last December. The previous December record was 10,767 loadings, set in 1973.

Petro-Canada Appointments

OTTAWA (CP) — Three top businessmen, including one with strong ties to the oil industry, were named today to the board of the government's new oil company.

Directors named from the country's corporate board rooms by Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie are Donald G. (Bud) Willmot of Toronto, Donald Harvie of Calgary and J. Claude Hebert of Montreal. Harvie, whose family made a fortune in western oil, resigned as a director and senior vice-president of Canadian Petrofina Ltd. to join the board of Petro-Canada.

Willmot, chairman of Molson Companies, stepped down as a director of Texaco Canada Ltd. to accept the appointment.

The third corporate director, Hebert, 61, vice-chairman of Warnock Hersey International Ltd. and chairman and chief executive officer of Bombardier and MWL Worthington Ltd.

Harvie, 51, is the son of Eric Harvie, reputed to have made more than $100 million after Canada's first major oil strike was made at Leduc, Alta., in 1947. He held the mineral rights for the land, which were leased to Imperial Oil Ltd., and collected a 10-per-cent royalty on crude oil production.

David Mann, a Halifax lawyer experienced in the legal aspects of oil importation, will represent the eastern provinces on the board.

Mann represented the provincially-owned Nova Scotia Power Corp. in a recent drawn-out court dispute with Imperial Oil Ltd. over oil prices. Imperial attempted to raise prices to the corporation when world oil prices quadrupled two years ago, but the courts ruled that under terms of a contract it had to sell oil at the older, much lower price.

From within government, Gillespie appointed Gordon MacNabb, 44, deputy minister of energy; W. H. Hopper, 42, former assistant deputy minister who is to be Petro-Canada's vice-president; Arthur Kroeger, 48, deputy minister of Indian affairs and northern development; and T. K. Shoyama, deputy minister of energy.

Six vacancies remain on the board, but at least one appointment is expected in the near future. A department spokesman said a director will be named from British Columbia "to round out regional representation."

Nixon Papers Held Back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Richard Nixon is not entitled to immediate possession of his presidential papers because they must be preserved for historic purposes and Nixon might be tempted to tamper with them to hide possible misconduct in office, a three-judge federal court has ruled.

Nixon was advised of the ruling shortly after it was handed down Wednesday. His lawyers refused to quote Nixon's reaction, but said "it was predictable. He was disappointed as is anyone when they lose a court case."

Nixon told them to take an immediate appeal to the Supreme Court.

City Cablevision Spending Rapped

Less than four per cent of its $2.8 million cash flow is proposed for spending on community programming by Channel 10 Victoria Cablevision, according to Capital Cable Co-operative in a letter to Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

CCC is competing for the community programming licence now held by Victoria Cablevision, a subsidiary of Premier Cablevision, which has holdings in Greater Vancouver, Toronto, Oakville, Ireland, two cable equipment firms and professional sports enterprises.

The co-operative, headed by John Young of Victoria, calls for the CRTC to break up multiple cable holdings by licensees and return to the principle of local ownership.

Hearings by the CRTC in Vancouver Feb. 3 and Victoria Feb. 5 are an opportunity for the commission to consider this stand and to set a priority on divestiture by Premier of its Victoria outlet, CCC said.

The co-operative argues that a company with diverse holdings is more inclined to spend money on expansion into new areas rather than bolstering the local facilities it already owns.

Victoria Cablevision's licence renewal application foresees an expenditure of $100,000 on community programming, or less than four per cent of the company's annual cash flow, compared with 10 per cent recommended by CRTC as a reasonable guide to ensure "responsible development."

CCC also says a transfer of shares by Northwest Community Video Ltd. to Microwave Cablevision Ltd. as requested by CRTC, would have the effect of placing ownership of North and West Vancouver, Nanaimo, Nelson and Castlegar cable facilities in Alberta instead of Ontario and Manitoba, which is no improvement toward local ownership.

LOST MASTER FOUND?

LANSING, Ill. (UPI) — A painting bought in Britain for $12 and that may be a lost Rembrandt worth $1 million today was locked in a Chicago vault for safekeeping.

The possibility that the purchaser had found a masterpiece so unversed the owner that he left the painting at police headquarters where three extra officers were placed on guard duty for 24 hours.

Police said the man, whose name was withheld because he feared the work might be stolen, bought the painting in an antique shop in Britain two months ago without knowing it might be the work of a master. He paid the equivalent of $12.

An art dealer cleaning the painting for the buyer uncovered initials in the lower left corner which led him to believe the work was a Rembrandt.

He died on a diving job at the South Forks Dam, near here, Oct. 30.

The jury found that Moncrieff had died of a burst lung "and other causes," which

Solitary Ends at B.C. Pen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Six prisoners at the British Columbia Penitentiary in New Westminster have been moved from solitary confinement in apparent compliance with a recent federal court decision, according to the Province.

The morning newspaper says the prisoners were put in high-security cells Wednesday. Moved were Andrew Brue, Dwight Lucas and Claire Wilson, the three prisoners involved in last June's hostage-taking incident at the penitentiary.

Brue was one of the seven prisoners who launched the successful civil action.

The province says others transferred included Melvin Miller, Dwight Lowe and S. A. Hall.

Dragan Cernevic, director of the penitentiary, was holding a press conference today to "discuss the solitary confinement unit" and a tour of the cells was to be provided afterwards.

The Province says the prison officials withheld immediate announcement of the transfer to give them time to explain the new routine to two shifts of security officers. The newspaper says the prison was closed between shifts Wednesday afternoon for the guards to be briefed on new procedures.

Boston Port Shut

BOSTON (UPI) — The Port of Boston has been closed by a walkout of 220 longshoremen involved in a contract dispute. There was no indication when negotiations would resume.

they agreed were probably due to sudden change in depth of the diver due to the loss of his weight belt.

They found that the death was unnatural but accidental.

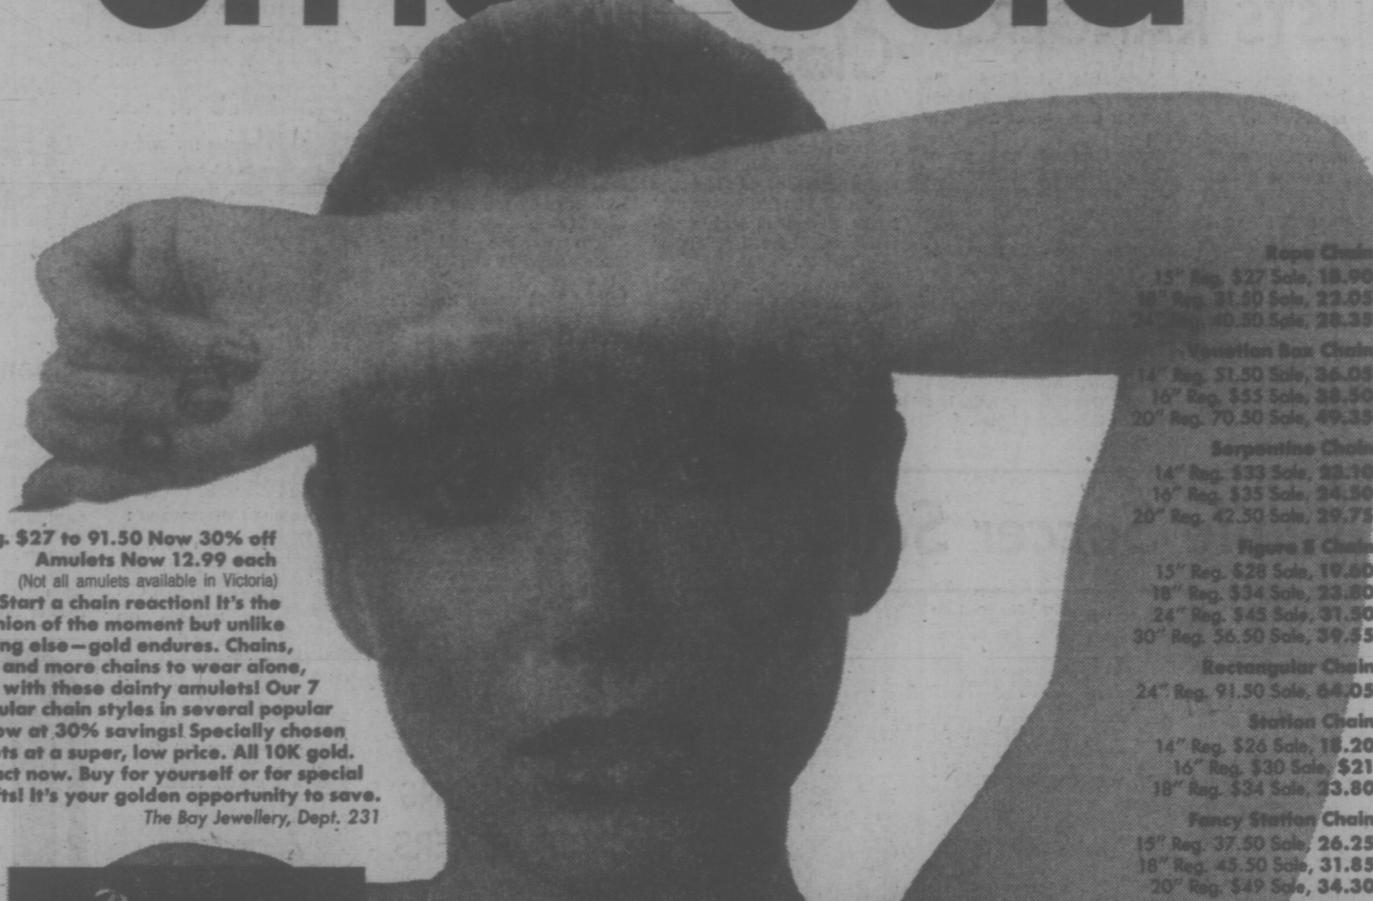

Evidence showed that Moncrieff was wearing a Uni-suit during the dive.

The suit was described as one which can be filled with various amounts of air so the diver can control his own buoyancy.

Six Young Canadians Freed in Havana

EDMONTON (CP) — Six young people from Western Canada were released by Cuban authorities Wednesday morning after being detained for several hours and a seventh remains in custody.

Reports indicate at least two of the young people were from Edmonton. They were accused of mischief in a hotel. The seventh, identified as Thomas Curfield, 16, of Calgary is still being held in connection with the theft of 29 pesos, worth about $3, in Canadian money.

Cuban officials said there was no evidence that the six who were released were involved. Their detention forced them to miss their charter flight returning to Canada and the Canadian ambassador to Cuba, James Hyndman, said they took another flight later.

Hyndman said Curfield is still in jail in Cuba but should be deported today. He is accused of stealing money from the hotel cash drawer, and the case has been handed over by the police to Cuban immigration authorities.

The Canadians were in Havana as part of a Christmas travel tour put together by Sun Tours Ltd.

Wallace To Stay

Scott Wallace said Wednesday he will not seek the leadership of the national Progressive Conservative party.

"There are few things in life of which I am completely certain," Wallace said, adding a decision not to seek the national leadership is one of them.

Wallace, only Conservative in the Legislature, said he does not support any of the 16 candidates in the leadership race "at the moment."

Wallace also said the British Columbia Progressive Conservative party must be more effectively administered to prepare for the next provincial election.

RECORD KIDNAP DRAMA OVER

Times News Service

PARIS — A telephone number found in the trouser cuff of a suspect led police to kidnapped record company chief Louis Hazan Wednesday night, and today the police were hunting for six of his kidnappers.

The telephone number was that of a walled house in Trembley les Villages, a small town 70 miles west of Paris. Inside, police found Hazan chained and gagged in a cupboard but unharmed after a week in captivity.

The police said five other members of the kidnapping gang, including the leader and his brother, have been arrested and that none of the $3.4-million ransom demanded was paid.

Meanwhile, a French pop singer, his manager and a friend of his music group, The Three Minstrels, were killed early today with pistol shots in the head in a mysterious attack in a rundown country house south of Paris.

"We have no rational explanation for the triple murder," a police investigator said. "It may be a question of money, sex, or anything else."

S. Africa Pullout a Poser

Times News Service

WASHINGTON — United States officials say a pullout of South African troops from Angola would pose no problem, but that they are unaware of any imminent withdrawal from the strife-torn former Portuguese colony.

The officials expect the Organization of African Unity to consider a resolution condemning South African intervention in the Angolan civil war. If it is accepted, the Pretoria government is not expected to resist.

Friends of the United States, which is backing anti-Marxist forces in the African country, cling to the hope that the African summit will go on to call for a withdrawal by all outside powers.

In U.S. terms, this would include Cuba, which is estimated to have up to 7,500 troops fighting alongside the Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola.

The Soviet Union has several hundred advisers on the scene.

Earlier, NBC News reported that South Africa was preparing to withdraw from Angola within 48 hours.

But a state department spokesman would neither confirm nor deny the report, saying the South African government "hasn't informed us of its intentions and it is not clear to us what its intentions are."

The French and Belgian governments, meanwhile, issued separate appeals Wednesday for an end to foreign military intervention in Angola as European concern over the fighting mounted.

Diplomatic sources said France had told the European Common Market partners that Europe should wait until the special OAU summit meeting had acted.

OLD BUILDINGS CONDEMNED

$1M for 'Sweatshop' Yard

Working conditions reminiscent of Industrial Revolution sweatshops will soon be over for employees in the city of Victoria public works yard at Garibaldi Road.

The public works committee today recommended new facilities be built at a cost of nearly $1 million, after hearing that some of the present buildings in the yard date back to 1914 and have been condemned by the Workers' Compensation Board.

The new facilities will include almost 100 per cent more vehicle space for servicing and maintenance, new workshops for sheet metal and welding, painting and carpentry, lunch room and shower and locker amenities.

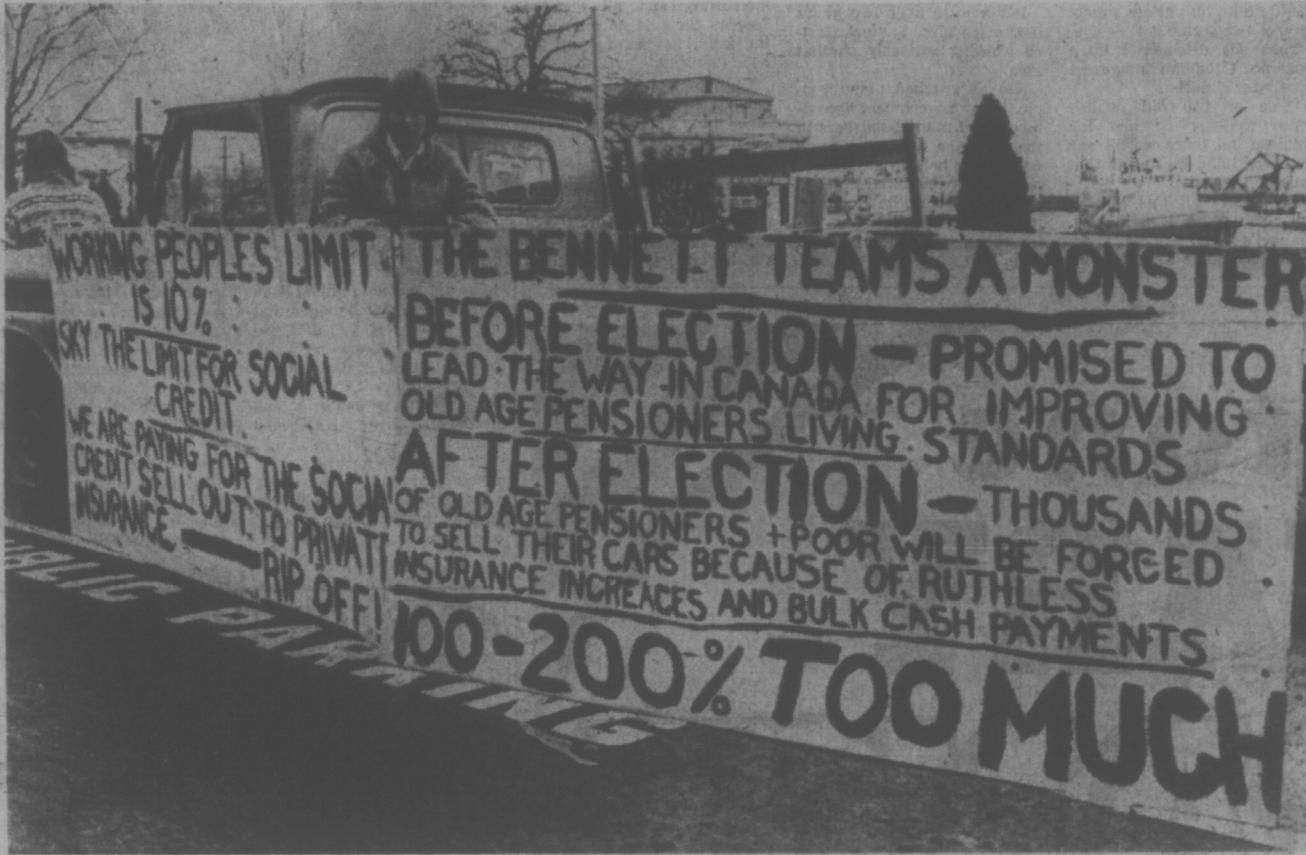

City engineer John Sansom told aldermen the present buildings are so inadequate that even employees who work in the sewers are not able to shower and change before going home.

He showed a number of slides of grimy, cluttered workshops with bad lighting and inadequate ventilation, including a blacksmith's shop of 1914 vintage and "the original horse barn" first used by the city.

On one slide, showing a venerable belt drive for a lathe, Sansom said "Ainslie Helmcken (the city archivist) will have his eye on that."

The committee was told that if the new workshop complex had been built more than three years ago as originally proposed, there would have been a cost saving of more than $300,000. But city manager Jim Bramley noted that the original allocation had been channeled to other projects which, if delayed, would also now be more expensive.

The committee decided to recommend the expenditure out of the tax sale funds account and to call for tenders.

ONE-MAN BATTLE against hike in ICBC rates is waged by boilermaker apprentice Al Sutton who parked his truck outside the Legislative Buildings today and posted signs claiming the increases are a ripoff. He said a "businessmen's government" like Social Credit should be able to make ICBC work without large rate increases. (John McKay photo)

New Lampson School Proposal At Talks with Parents Tonight

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

School board officials will present a new proposal for the future of Lampson Street elementary school at a special meeting with parents tonight.

The proposal, to come from school board chairman Bill Ross, is designed as an alternative to a controversial earlier plan to make Lampson a primary school and reroute intermediate grades to neighboring schools.

A similar reaction is expected tonight, says parents' auxiliary spokesman Sheila Vrdenburgh.

Ross said the proposal will be discussed along with the general principle of the board being much more flexible with the grade organization of schools.

He said parents seem to agree the board should implement economies, but there is a reluctance to change appearing at the meetings.

Proposal to divert students to a variety of schools including the secondary school would mean costly renovations would not be necessary at the present Lampson site.

Indications are the new plan will involve Vic West, Rockheights, Macaulay, Highrock schools and Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

Se said parents are angry their small neighborhood school would be closed.

School board officials have forecast declining enrolment for both Lampson and Tillicum schools from 539 to 385 pupils in 1979, for Lampson and 524 in 1969 to 391 in 1975, for Tillicum a trend expected to continue.

But Mrs. Vrdenburgh says the board "hasn't done its homework" and no survey of pre-school aged children has been conducted in Lampson area to back up those predictions.

Gene Miller, publisher of Monday, said today the weekly newspaper is going through a "reorganization" over the next two or three weeks and he is searching for more financial backing.

Last edition, the 26th, appeared Dec. 22 and Miller said publication would not resume "until we've got a number of things straightened away, including money and a much stronger advertising sales staff." Staff at the paper numbers about 12.

Monday, which described itself as a weekly magazine on newsprint offering a more personal perspective on local issues, events and people, had a circulation of about 20,000. It sold for 25 cents but most copies were home-delivered free by mail.

"If readership was the key to success, we're in fine shape," Miller said. But he added that unless the paper can find enough capital, it can't continue.

"What I'm doing is finding investors, large and small, on a day-to-day basis."

Monday was launched last summer with the financial backing of three local businessmen, including former Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen. Miller declined to name the other two, saying he believes they don't want publicity.

The admiral said he hopes

She said parents have contacted the Esquimalt municipal engineer Mac Campbell and "he predicts an increase of 600 in school-aged children in the municipality."

That increase is sufficient to warrant a new school in the north end, she said.

Trustees are being forced to make a decision on the future of Lampson on poorly researched, inaccurate and incomplete information, said Mrs. Vrdenburgh.

"They're falling into a trap of short-term planning when population in the area is on the upswing."

The school board has to decide the fate of several elementary schools this month and the Lampson meeting is one of several that have been held in the schools concerned during the last week.

A special board meeting has been called for Wednesday to discuss proposals for the schools.

The proposals that have met hefty parent opposition were designed to bypass the need for expensive renovations in some schools by transferring the students to schools where there is extra space.

But Vrdenburgh says neighboring schools — Macaulay, Rockheights and Vic West — have little extra space.

That increase is sufficient

Early Warning System Urged On Escapes

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

An early warning system to alert nearby residents of William Head prison escapes was proposed today by the head of the RCMP Colwood detachment.

Staff-Sgt. Ted Foster said in an interview he intends to call a meeting of residents to see if such a system could be developed.

His proposal would involve setting up a telephone network on which residents would call neighbors when there was an escape from the medium-security institution.

Foster's proposal comes in the wake of the escape of a 28-year-old convicted rapist, Harry Ronald Fugard, who apparently swam to freedom Tuesday night. Fugard, considered by police as potentially dangerous, remained at large.

Foster said that in recent months he has received an increasing number of calls from residents alarmed by the frequency of escape from the prison.

Although Fugard was the first inmate to flee this year, there were seven such incidents last year, a police spokesman noted. One involved a Metchosin couple held captive, at knife point, by an escaper for more than six hours.

Foster said one woman, who lives alone raising sheep on a small farm on Rocky Point Road, was so upset that even though it is lambing time she is afraid to go out to the barn at night.

The ratepayers' groups in Metchosin and William Head have long pressed the federal government for greater security at the institution and a warning system which would let residents know when there is an escape.

Last year, when the prison was reclassified from minimum to medium-security status, additional fencing, sentinel stations and lighting were installed. But no warning system.

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, said today his group has appealed to the solicitor general "at least 10 times" asking for such a system. Each time the request has been denied.

"The reason they have given is they couldn't do that because it might upset the prisoners," Waterman said.

He welcomed Foster's proposal and said it would be supported by all the residents in the area. However, he didn't feel it would be enough.

The problem, he said, is the officials at William Head don't always notify the RCMP the moment a prisoner goes missing.

"I know of cases where an inmate has been out for at least 48 hours and the police weren't even advised," he asserted.

In the case of Fugard's escape, RCMP weren't contacted until 10:30 p.m., a half-hour after guards had first found him missing from a routine head count.

"A half-hour is just too damn long," Waterman lamented. "We want to know immediately it happens."

Meanwhile, a Canada-wide warrant has been issued for the arrest of Fugard who was serving eight years for rape, possession of stolen property, escape and four break-ins committed in West Vancouver in the fall of 1972.

Prison officials with tracking dogs searched the shoreline opposite the medium-security institution Wednesday morning but failed to pick up any trace of the fugitive.

A police spokesman said there were no break-ins in the area but there was a report of a truck stolen overnight in the vicinity of the prison. It was recovered about four miles away near Casa Linda Motel in Colwood. The spokesman said finger印 smears were taken and will be matched against Fugard's prints on record. However, he added, he was doubtful there was any tie-in between the theft of the vehicle and the escape.

"Our investigation indicates there was probably help... on the other side of the fence," he said.

Police are unsure if Fugard is still on the Island or was able to get off. The spokesman conceded it was entirely possible the escaper made the fast ferry to the mainland Tuesday.

Although born and raised in Ontario, Fugard has a brother living in Vancouver. Police are keeping a careful watch in both places.

Art Gallery Needs $150,000 To Release Government Grants

cost under the Community Recreation Fund, if the application is made by Feb. 1.

Almost $20,000 has already been collected through private contributions, he said, and "if worst comes to worst" the gallery will schedule fund-raising events.

"But I refuse to believe the public will not back their gallery. It's a golden opportunity. For every $1 contributed by the community, the provincial and federal governments contribute $5," said Boulet.

Expansion will almost double the Gallery, adding space to the three sides of the building to provide extra display and storage space, a separate room for film presentations and lectures and better washroom facilities.

Death Car Driver Negligent

A coroner's jury Wednesday found that a car operated by a juvenile was driven in a criminally negligent manner which resulted in an accident and the death of a passenger, 16-year-old Matthew Riel.

The accident occurred on Sept. 25.

Riel, Malcolm Berge, 14, and the juvenile driver, all lived at the human resources group home at 522 Rupert.

In a statement read to the jury Berge said the car had been driven at speeds of 70 and 80 miles an hour before it swerved off Brookleigh Road, near Elk Lake, and plunged 100 feet down a grassy embankment.

Riel was dead on arrival at Victoria General Hospital at 2:40 a.m.

The juvenile driver received severe leg injuries and is still in hospital.

A police investigation showed that the car had been stolen the previous night from a parking lot at the rear of an apartment at 999 Heywood.

Forms For OAP

Application forms for the federal guaranteed income supplement to the old age pensioners will be in the mail to all senior citizens by Jan. 15.

A spokesman for the federal health and welfare department said the forms are usually in the mail by year end, but this year there was a delay in printing and delivery.

Clover Pt. Sewer Outfall Delayed Again

Construction of a 6,400-foot sewage outfall at Clover Point was delayed once again Wednesday when the Capital Regional Board decided to take another look at engineering arrangements.

With planning almost complete for the project and cost estimates now at about $8 million, regional directors balked at the suggestion of employing a third set of engineers to oversee construction.

Engineering costs to date stand at about $412,000, the board was told.

Two firms, Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. and Associated Engineering Services Ltd., have been sharing design work, one handling the shore-based mains and pumps and the other the underwater pipe which will disperse the sewage over a mile offshore.

Last month Victoria members on the board urged appointment of a single prime consultant. Wednesday the board's public works committee responded by suggesting the board hire its own engineers to oversee construction while retaining the two firms.

The matter was tabled for three weeks while the committee takes another look.

The Clover Point outfall has been in the talking and planning stage four years while five million gallons of raw sewage has been dumped daily at tideline. The present outfall has been operating since 1894.

The project was delayed over the past year while Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay worked out a complicated formula for sharing the cost. It is sewage from these three municipalities which will be handled by the system.

The outfall will not only handle the five million gallons a day now discharged near shore at McMicking Point in Oak Bay.

A similar 6,000-foot outfall at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt went into operation over four years ago and has eliminated most of the shoreline pollution there. Monitoring at the mouth of the outfall has shown no significant environmental damage there.

Directors showed themselves in an austerity mood on more than engineering costs Wednesday. They rejected a recommendation from the public works committee that additional space be rented for the building inspection office at Langford.

The committee had given no reason for needing the extra room for a staff of about 11.

At the start of the meeting, Jim Campbell, director from the Outer Gulf Islands, was re-elected to a fourth term as chairman and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young was re-elected chairman of the regional

'Impossible Dream' Close to Reality

Two years ago it looked like an impossible dream.

Today, barring unforeseen delays, it is within four months of becoming an exciting reality.

All because Evelyn Samuel believed in it, was willing to give precious spare time to work for it and to use her own money to prove it is worthwhile.

I'm talking about an all-Canadian magazine for boys and girls in ages from five to 12 and with everything in it emphasizing the Canadian fact.

Target date for the first edition is in the month of May and if it goes over, as Mrs. Samuel is confident it will, it should be coming out quarterly from then on.

Evelyn Samuel came from Edmonton a little over a year ago, with her three children, to make her home in Victoria.

She is a public school teacher with a K-1 class (kindergarten and Grade 1) at Northridge School here.

During her teaching career in the Alberta capital and when her own children reached school age, she became increasingly conscious of the lack of lively, interesting and accurate material in school text books and school libraries, about Canadians and Canada.

"There was (and still is) plenty of material about other countries—China, Japan, Europe and the United States," she says, "but little or nothing about our pioneer forefathers and the part they played in Canada's growth."

Being of Ukrainian descent, she also found a lack of authentic data on various ethnic groups "deplored."

Then she discovered there was no Canadian magazine purely for children.

"One or two did publish some writings by and for children but there wasn't one that was fully devoted to that type of production."

Eventually all this kindled the germ of an idea in Mrs. Samuel's mind.

Why not some sort of publication geared to awaken the imagination and stir the pride of young Canadian boys and girls in their own country?

Finally she decided to "go it alone."

She firmly believed the time was ripe and that need great for the type of magazine she proposed.

So she started to save her own money to cover cost of publishing a first edition of the magazine.

In Edmonton, immediately her decision was known, historians, writers, artists, poets and those knowledgeable in preparing, editing and compiling such a publications came to her assistance.

"That didn't quite cover it," she says now.

"What I was more concerned with was something that would be on-going and keep the interest alive. An all-Canadian children's magazine seemed to be the answer."

It's a little over two years now since Mrs. Samuel started working seriously on that idea.

She approached many people, many government departments and many publishers in the hope she might get some backing or help in the way of a grant, for the initial work.

"Some were polite... some not so polite," she remembers, "and there was no money in the kitty, as yet, to pay for such material."

Only thing lacking is a good cartoon strip. "I would really love that," she says, a bit wistfully.

She is acting as her own publisher and she is planning to send courtesy copies of this first edition to as many school libraries in Canada as she can reach and to the media across the country—"to stimulate interest" as she puts it—with quiet confidence.

Already requests have been coming in from school libraries, teachers and parents, to be placed on a mailing list.

In the dedicated belief that enough interest will be generated through the initial effort to continue publication, Evelyn Samuel is looking now for well-written material and good illustrations for a second edition.

"It must be accurate, well researched and written in a way that will interest children in that five to 12 age group," she says.

childre

She is also looking for "a good mix" including humor, Canadian crafts, architecture, children can understand, puzzles, constructions with educational backgrounds, fiction, poetry and little or well-known historic events.

Writers, illustrators, toy makers, puzzle constructors, historians, scientists and anyone in comparable categories "who love children and the Canadian scene" and who may wish to volunteer help (free at the moment) in this worthwhile effort may get in touch with Mrs. Samuel (evenings or weekends) by telephoning 479-6906.

Lessons for No. 2

DEAR ABBY: Nearly a year ago, after 24 years of marriage and four children, my husband asked me for a divorce.

It seems that although we were the same age when we got married, I suddenly got "too old" for him, so he found himself a girl his daughter's age and traded me in for her.

Somewhat I survived the blow, but listen to this: Yesterday he phoned and these were his exact words, "Honey, if I sent Marcia (his young wife) over, would you please give her some cooking lessons? She's a great kid, but she never learned how to cook."

I was so shocked at his colossal nerve I didn't know what to say, so after a long pause I said, "I'll think about it and let you know."

Abby, the last thing I want to do is give this girl cooking lessons. Am I wrong? How should I handle this hot potato? — NUMBER ONE

DEAR ONE: With asbestos mittens. Tell your husband that you've thought it over and decided to let him eat crow.

DEAR ABBY: I have a 2-year-old grandson whom I am worried. His father gives him "sips" of martini, beer or anything he happens to be drinking.

I have tried to tell my son-in-law that it is harmful to the child, but he says it won't hurt the boy, and he continues to ignore me.

I have seen the baby take two, three and four sips of a martini. Everyone laughs and makes him think it's cute, so he is encouraged to take more.

Is it possible for a child to become an alcoholic this way? Or will he (as my son-in-law says) develop a tolerance for it? — NEW JERSEY

DEAR NEW JERSEY: The possibility of developing a "taste" for alcohol is greater than developing a tolerance for it. Your son-in-law must have onion soup for brains.

DEAR ABBY: My husband,

$4,000 Dinner Brings Glut of Reader Criticism

New York Times

NEW YORK — Many readers wrote to The New York Times in response to an article by Craig Claiborne in which he described a $4,000 dinner that he had shared with a colleague in Paris. (The article was reprinted in this paper Nov. 14.)

The dinner, which was prepared at Claiborne's request, is to be paid for by American Express, which had donated a dinner without price ceiling to WNET, the local public broadcasting station, for its fundraising auction last June. Claiborne submitted a high bid of $300.

Of the more than 250 letters received so far, virtually all were condemnatory. A sampling of the letters, some excerpted, and Claiborne's reply follow.

With the glut of "problem" news items, it was inevitable, perhaps, that a note of levity was thought to be introduced with the account of the $4,000 dinner at Chez Denis in Paris that was attended by Craig Claiborne and friend and considered to be a newsworthy morsel, to be digested with relish by your readers.

In these times, if you'll forgive my levity, it was cruel to expose your customers to such twaddle, when a large percentage of the world still has problems feeding multitudes on a dollar. What kind of responsible journalism is this, and what kind of a person would go to such lengths to have some "fun" at American Express' expense, both figuratively and literally? To their credit, they took it with exceeding good grace and a sense of humor (?) what else could they do under the circumstances of a fait accompli?

George Moffatt Smith,
New York.

It is almost unbelievable that The New York Times, the employer of Mr. Claiborne, saw fit to publicize this vulgarity at length on its front page, and then compound a sick joke by including a paragraph about it in the summary of the important events of the day. It forces one to question the values of a newspaper that was once considered to be the nation's best. Is The Times reduced to pandering to the tastes of those who thrive on tales of extravagance, wasteful luxury and extreme frivolity?

This indigent could well be taken as an alarming omen. We have long heard of the decadence that today's Times should make front-page news of a piece so frivolous, evanescent and unredeeming as Craig Claiborne's $4,000 feast for two!

Granted the world could use some respite from the unrelied madness and crises of our age, but to flaunt such a tale of culinary extravagance — at a cost that could have fed 800 people for one day — only deepens gloom and cynicism.

Louis S. Greenbaum,
North Amherst, Mass.

It is almost unbelievable that The New York Times, the employer of Mr. Claiborne, saw fit to publicize this vulgarity at length on its front page, and then compound a sick joke by including a paragraph about it in the summary of the important events of the day. It forces one to ques-

This indigent could well be taken as an alarming omen. We have long heard of the decadence that preceded the collapse of the Roman Empire, or the French Revolution. Will future historians use this dinner as a symbol of the moral decay and debasement to be found in the United States shortly before its fall?

Robert D. Schick,
West Chester, Pa.

I was delighted to read Craig Claiborne's amusing article on his $4,000 dinner for two.

After all, there is no reason some of us should deprive ourselves of a good meal, just because hunger is a chronic illness among millions of children and adults in the "modern" world. Let them eat please, not from a "most ordinary dish."

Georganne Chapin,
New York.

Banish Mr. Claiborne to Chock Full O' Nuts.

David Millar Jr.,
Plainfield, N.H.

I am curious as to why The Times gave front-page and extensive coverage to Craig Claiborne's recent repast. Since the dinner was not an important news event, perhaps The Times was implying that it had sociological significance in terms of its conspicuous consumption.

Maybe you were trying to highlight the fact that food prices are continuing to rise, that life does go on despite high unemployment, cutbacks in funding and threats of default.

My own feeling is that the article was a piece of journalistic indiscretion, and an insult to the sensibilities of your readers.

Lucille A. Fontana, Yorkers.

CLAIBORNE'S REPLY

I view with enormous regret the emotions of those who feel that the meal on which I dined in Paris for $4,000 was obscene or decadent or a symbol of contempt for the hunger that exists in the world today.

I would like to ask those who were not amused if they seriously believe that as a result of that evening I have deprived one human being of one mouthful of food. To put it another way, if the meal had not occurred, would one more mouth have been fed, one more body been nourished?

I feel enormously privileged to have participated in that meal and have no intention of putting an onus on American Express. It was my enthusiasm and excess that caused the total bill. But I do not think it represents contempt for world hunger any more than if I had won the Mercedes-Benz that was put up for auction.

Pork-and Ripe Olives —Make for Meaty Chili

Every chili lover has a favorite way to make it, but they all round out to the same conclusion . . . a chunky, spicy concoction of meat and other ingredients that takes the chill off winter weather, or satisfies a hearty appetite.

Here's chili con carne the way it originated in Mexico and South America as a spicy stew of diced meat cooked with onions, garlic, and chili powder. Chunks of beef and pork are simmered in a rich, flavorful broth. Unsweetened chocolate is a touch of authenticity going back to early days when Spanish nuns in Mexico learned from the Indians that ground bits of roasted cocoa beans were a tasty addition to spicy foods.

Whole ripe olives are an important and delicious addition to this chili recipe, too. Their rich dark color and mellow flavor make a nice contrast in the spicy mixture. Canned ripe olives, in fact, are often used to extend the flavor and meatiness of many types of stews.

Serve this flavorful chili over rice and cooked red beans, with plenty of chopped onion and shredded cheese to top it off.

1/2 lb. pork, cubed

1 tablespoon chili powder
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon thyme, crumbled
1/2 teaspoon cumin

1 cup canned pitted ripe olives
1 (8-oz.) can tomato sauce
1/2 oz. unsweetened chocolate, coarsely chopped

Call It Sugar

NEW YORK (AP) — In the sugar industry "mother liquor" is the syrup remaining after a quantity of sugar syrup has been processed and one-half of the sugar forms crystals. The whole amount is dripped and the "mother liquor" spun off in a centrifuge. This first result produces the whitest sugar.

BROWN BETTY

(4 to 6 servings)
4 cups small bread cubes (about 4 slices)
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
2 teaspoons fresh grated lemon peel
3/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons fresh

Cut beef and pork into bite-sized pieces. Heat 3 tablespoons oil in Dutch oven. Brown meat well. Add remaining tablespoon oil, onion, green pepper, garlic and cook until soft but not browned. Stir in chili powder, salt, thyme and cumin. Cook one minute longer. Add water. Heat to boiling. Turn heat low, cover and simmer 45 minutes. Stir in olives, tomato sauce, and chocolate. Simmer uncovered 25-30 minutes longer until thickened. Serve chili on top of bed of beans and rice. Makes 4 1/2 cups (four generous servings).

Dentists refer to crisp, crunchy foods as detergent foods because they help to remove other food particles from the teeth. Sticky, high-carbohydrate foods that adhere to the teeth are quickly acted upon by bacteria commonly found in the mouth. The acids produced during this bacterial digestion can etch the enamel and thus produce a site for decay. Chewing crunchy, low-carbohydrate foods as celery, apples, carrot strips and radishes can do much to remove sticky foods from teeth.

QUESTION:
Are Teflon-coated skillets safe?

ANSWER:
Teflon skillets are perfectly safe to use. Teflon is a coating material applied on the surface of the skillet to prevent food from sticking. When the product was introduced, concern was expressed that the coating material would decompose, releasing toxic materials. Teflon does not decompose at normal cooking temperatures. Teflon would decompose, however, if exposed to temperatures above 600 degrees Fahrenheit; but such a high temperature is never reached, even in frying, as fats and oils decompose at about 420 degrees Fahrenheit. One can be assured that the decomposition temperature of Teflon is well above cooking temperatures used in the home.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

To play "duplicate bridge" well, one must be thoroughly familiar with the scoring. Just why this is so can be observed in today's deal, which was played in a duplicate game. Sitting West was one of our nation's top-ranking players, George Rapee, of New York City.

Both sides vulnerable. East deals.

Opening lead: Ace of ♦.

As the cards lie, seven hearts is easily makable, since the diamond suit can be established by ruffing a third diamond lead. But the grand slam is just about impossible to reach.

Against South's sacrificial bid of six spades, Rapee opened the diamond ace and continued with the seven. Dummy's queen as put up hearts.

and East took the trick with his king. East then cashed the king and ten of hearts, after which he shifted back to diamonds, playing the jack. South ruffed with the nine.

Here was where Rapee did some rapid mathematics. He could overruff with the king of spades, and after that his partner would get the ace of clubs, but that would put the enemy down only five tricks — 1,400 points — against the at least 1,450 points which his side could make at a slam contract in hearts. What good was 1,400 points if the other East-West players, holding the same cards, scored 1,430 points?

Rapee played like a man who couldn't overruff the nine of spades, and risked never making a spade trick — he discarded the club three!

South next led the spade jack and when West played low, declarer thought exactly what he was expected to think. If West couldn't overruff the preceding trick, East must have the king of spades, and the only hope was to find it unguarded. So dummy's ace of spades was put up — and South was amazed when East discarded a diamond.

Now when the next spade was led, Rapee took his king and returned his remaining club. East won with the ace, played back a club, and West ruffed. That put the contract down six tricks, for a loss of 1,700 points. That score beat every East-West pair in the field except the lone East-West pair who had bid and made the grand slam in hearts.

Concert Times Clash

Music lovers will be faced with a difficult choice this Sunday with two concert taking place at 2:30 p.m. at widely separate locations.

In the McPherson Playhouse, Victoria Musical Art Society will present former Victorian Liam Hendry in a piano recital.

And across town in the University of Victoria MacLaurin Auditorium, a department of music faculty concert will feature leading resident artists Robin Wood, Sydney Humphreys and Richard Ely in Brahms' famous Horn Trio, and George Corwin conducting a chamber ensemble in a performance of William Walton's Facade Suite.

Miss Hendry, after graduation from the Victoria Conservatory where she was a student of Robin Wood, has pursued her career with further study and performance in the United Kingdom, principally in London.

Her teachers there are the renowned John Lill, Peter Katrin and Andrea Tschakovsky and she is also doing solo and ensemble work professionally.

The young artist has given solo recitals and appeared with orchestras across Canada and in Scotland. Before returning to London she will record a recital in Vancouver for the CBC.

Her Sunday program features a Mozart group, including the Sonata in E-flat, K 570, Beethoven Sonata Op. 101, and Schumann Toccata, November numbers five and seven, and Symphonies Etudes. Tickets for both musical events will be available at the door.

Court Accepts Theft Admission

Larry Allan Preston admitted in a signed statement to police that he took three television sets and change from two cigarette machines from a Colwood hotel in November, 1974, county court was told Wednesday.

Judge E. J. C. Stewart ruled the handwritten statement admissible after several hours of legal argument by Crown counsel Dwight Whitson and defence counsel Bruce McConman.

Preston is accused of two counts of breaking and entering and theft at the King John Inn, 2668 Sooke Road, and possession of three color televisions, silver coins and 37 bottles of liquor knowing them to have been obtained by theft.

In his brief statement, Preston said he entered the hotel on two occasions, did not have permission to do so, took two television sets on one occasion and one set plus the coins on a second occasion, and that it was a voluntary statement. His trial adjourned Wednesday until today to fix a date for continuation.

McConman sought an adjournment because a material witness is out of the country and may be back by the end of the month.

He also wanted to consider his position on police electronic surveillance of a room at the Tally-Ho Hotel where police found Preston and two others, Hilton Reid and Deanna Payne.

The B.C. Court of Appeal was considering an appeal of a Victoria case involving electronic eavesdropping this week, said McConman, and there could be legal definition of the authority to install a wiretap and the meaning of the word "indirectly" in a new section of the Criminal Code.

Whitson said the Crown could not consent to any further adjournments because the case has been outstanding for a long time and the alleged offence occurred 14 months ago.

But Judge Stewart said he was prepared to grant the defence motion in order to give Preston "every opportunity" to present a defence.

Asked if police made use of the electronic information "indirectly" Dew said "yes I suppose we did."

McConman referred in his motion for an adjournment, to Section 178 of the Criminal Code which says an intercepted private communication where evidence is obtained "directly or indirectly" is inadmissible unless the interception was lawfully made or the originator of the private communication consented.

Whitson, however, called Deanna Payne to the witness stand and she agreed she gave her consent to use any evidence acquired, directly or indirectly, from the buggering and that she had been made aware of the buggering of the hotel room at the time.

Cross-examined by McConman, she said police told her after her arrest that if she didn't tell them what she knew "I would go up the creek for three years with the rest of my friends."

Secrecy Shroud for Film

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — A four-hour television film of the Manson Family murders has been made here in total secrecy because of fear of reprisals by Charles Manson's followers against cast and crew, makers of the film say.

Tom Gries, director of the film Helter Skelter, based on a book of the same name by Manson trial prosecutor Vincent Bugliosi, said Wednesday:

"Some people received death threats and they were nervous, and we decided to film it without any publicity."

Gries said actors involved in the production, many of them unknowns, were asked to avoid contacts with the news media.

No date has been set for showing the film which will be released on television on two consecutive nights. Outside the United States, Helter Skelter will be shown in theatres.

Gries says he believes the reason why no airing date has been set is that CBS executives, who have not yet seen the film, are worried about possible violence in it.

CON-CURRENT SENTENCES

CLEVELAND — Larry Kaiser, 26, convicted of killing two men in separate holdup attempts, was sentenced Wednesday to be electrocuted twice in succession on May 7.

Judge John Patton, explaining he did not mean to be "facetious," said he pronounced the unusual sentence because he felt capital punishment was a deterrent to murder when carried out.

Even if Kaiser escaped one death sentence he would face the other, the judge added.

JFK Slurs 'Aimed At Ted'

INNSBRUCK, Austria — Pierre Salinger said today allegations the late President Kennedy had engaged in extramarital relations were designed to scotch Edward Kennedy's presidential chances.

Salinger, who served as press secretary throughout Kennedy's 32-month presidency, also told a news conference he knew of no extramarital activities by John Kennedy.

"It is not impossible that people following these stories around have another target," Salinger said. "John Kennedy is dead. The real target now is Ted Kennedy, even though he says he won't run for the presidency."

Nazi-Hunter Switches His Search to U.S.

VIENNA — Nazi-hunter Simon Wiesenthal said Wednesday he has tracked down some 70 former Soviet citizens living in the United States wanted for Second World War crimes. He wants the United States to strip the suspects of their American citizenship and extradite them to the Soviet Union for trial. Wiesenthal, who has tracked down 3,500 Nazis since the war, said he has stopped looking for war criminals in Austria because local courts almost always acquit them.

SHERBROOKE, Que. — Professional wrestler Maurice "Mad Dog" Vachon was ordered by Superior Court Wednesday to pay $5,400 to a spectator whose jaw he fractured during a match at the Sports Palace here, Oct. 7, 1972. Arnold McNab was in hospital for three weeks and said he was totally incapacitated for three months.

OAKLAND, Calif. — Former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver has been returned to Oakland to face attempted-murder charges stemming from a 1968 shootout with police. Cleaver was handcuffed and grim when sheriff's deputies led him into the Alameda County Jail Wednesday night. He returned to the U.S. in November after seven years in exile.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — FBI agents and police from Michigan to New York are looking for the head of a "cheque factory" accused of bilking hundreds of businesses millions in payrolls.

Investigators believe the man who has the answers is James Redican, president and founder of Computer Payroll & Accounting Services.

Until about two weeks ago, all seemed well between Redican's firm and the 600 west Michigan businesses it served.

Then, one by one, clients began calling to complain about holiday paychecks being covered.

Redican, 42, a short, stocky man who wore narrow ties with his dark hair combed back in duck-tail style, assured early complainers it was a computer error and the cheques were covered.

Then last Friday without warning, he fired his 50 employees — and locked the doors.

Redican's was just one of several local bookkeeping firms that charged a fee to make up for a recent computerized payroll and keep records for small businesses. Unlike most other firms, however, Redican required his clients' payrolls to pass through his account.

Most of the affected clients since have issued duplicate cheques to their employees and have absorbed the loss.

SMEW STRUTS STUFF

NEWPORT, R.I. — Bird watchers from several states have flocked to the seaside city of Newport, R.I., to watch a rare bird called a smew.

Lee Gardiner, director of the Norman Bird Sanctuary in nearby Middletown, said Wednesday the bird was probably migrating from Norway or Russia to the Mediterranean when it decided to stop here.

This may be the first-known smew sighting in the United States.

Little Jack Horner Comes Out Of His Corner . . . Swinging

Delegates won't be fooled, Horner predicted, by Heller's sudden support for the readmission to the party of Leonard Jones, the Moncton MP who was rejected by Stanfield as a Conservative candidate in the 1974 election for his anti-French stand.

In his emotionally keyed-up press conference the Alberta MP brushed off the other contenders who are expected to receive strong support from delegates to the Feb. 19-22 convention here:

— Kingston MP Flora MacDonald — as much like Margaret Thatcher elected last year as Conservative leader in Britain as Jack Horner is like David Lewis, former New Democrat leader.

— York-Simcoe MP Sinclair Stevens — who in his failure to set up the Bank of Western Canada and his connection with the financial difficulties of York Trust in the early 1960s "led so many Canadians down a ruinous road."

— Rocky Mountain MP Joe Clark — who doesn't understand people, and never invested a dollar in his life because he was either "writing speeches for other people or going to university."

Horner didn't single out other candidates, he explained, because he doesn't think they'll get much first ballot support at the convention.

Horner said the main leadership battle will be fought in Ontario,

10% LIMIT IN EDMONTON

EDMONTON (CP) — All city departments have been asked to limit their budgets to a 10-per-cent spending increase this year as the city heads into a year of fiscal restraint, Mayor Terry Cavanagh said Wednesday.

Some city programs will have to be curtailed, and others changed, he told a chamber of commerce meeting.

New Power Appeal

EDMONTON (CP) — Calgary Power Ltd. today appealed for continued co-operation from Albertans in curtailing use of electricity in an attempt to avert a major blackout.

Mechanical problems which developed Wednesday in a boiler unit at the company's Wabamun plant, about 45 miles west of here, are more serious than first expected, company spokesman Matt Hawkins said.

Mechanical problems shut down Alberta Power Ltd.'s Milner plant and cut its Battle River plant to partial power, along with Calgary Power's Wabamun and Sundance plants.

There is no indication when the Battle River plant will be restored to full operation, Hawkins said.

He added that the situation wouldn't have been critical if a third unit at Sundance had been installed as scheduled last fall. Operation of that unit has been delayed to March from November because of strikes.

CUPE SET TO IGNORE PAY GUIDE

EDMONTON (CP) — Three unions representing more than 11,000 Alberta hospital workers say they are ready to ignore federal wage guidelines in upcoming contract talks.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), the Civil Service Association (CSA), and Service Employees International (SEIU), have said they may ask for more than the guidelines allow.

Grace Hartman, national president of CUPE, said Tuesday that unions should ignore federal wage and price guidelines when negotiating contracts.

Al Cunningham, hospital coordinator for CUPE in Alberta, said hospitals should cut our duplication of services instead of asking workers to help them stay within the province's 11 per cent guideline.

Cunningham said in some classifications, CUPE members earn $100 less a month than their counterparts in British Columbia. Under the existing contract, most CUPE workers in Alberta hospitals gross monthly salary is $700, Cunningham said, and "nobody is getting rich or pushing up inflation on that."

Bill Broad, president of the 5,000-member CSA, was unwilling to say definitely whether the union would defy federal guidelines. The CSA contract expires March 31.

Vern Barta, president of the 1,500 workers, said his union will not follow the wage guidelines.

He said restrictions should not be put on SEIU members who have worked for low wages for years.

Alberta 'Keeps Vow On Syncrude'

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government is not dragging its feet on an oral agreement made last year with the federal and Ontario governments to save the Syncrude Canada Ltd. oil-sands project in northeastern Alberta, Energy Minister Don Getty said Wednesday night.

"We said we were prepared to help them and we are," Getty said in an interview.

He was responding to charges earlier in the day by federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie that the Alberta government "appears to be welsching" on the agreement, designed to save the project from collapse following Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd.'s (ARCO) withdrawal of its 30-per-cent share in the venture.

Uranium Rush Hits Washington

WELLPINIT, Wash. (AP) — Fuel-hungry energy companies have prompted an uranium rush in an area of north-eastern Washington where even the pine trees are slightly radioactive.

Major exploration efforts are testing the geological strata in a 7,343-square-mile area with core drills and sophisticated techniques to find new fuel sources for nuclear reactors.

There's a scurry to tie up exploration leases in Spokane, Ferry, Pend Oreille and Stevens counties.

Geologists say there may be as much as eight million tons of commercial uranium ore hidden in the region's varied terrain — from the low piney hills of the Huckleberry Mountains to the higher peaks of the Selkirk Range.

"I don't know if you'd call it a boom, but you can judge by the number of companies involved that there's something here," said Dr. Darwin Narjanian, a geologist for Bendix Field Engineering Corp.

Bendix is mapping the area's uranium deposits for the United States Energy Research and Development Administration.

The prospectors are a who's who of the giant energy corporations: Exxon, Continental Oil, Getty Oil, Reserve Oil, Burlington Northern, Inc., Westinghouse Corp. and Western Nuclear, Inc., a subsidiary of Phelps Dodge, the huge copper producer.

There are large foreign firms such as the French Pechiney UGINE Ruhmann Development, Inc., Uranerz-

U.S.A. of West Germany and smaller U.S. companies, including Dawn Mining Co., Midnite Mines and Uranis Explorations.

Washington's uranium likely contains less than 4 percent of estimated U.S. reserves, but mining companies say they are interested because of a tripling in the price of "yellowcake," processed uranium oxide ore.

Yellowcake, which hovered at about $8 a pound a year ago, is selling for $22 a pound, following President Ford's announced plan last June to end the U.S. government's monopoly on enriched uranium production. The proposal is under consideration by the U.S. Congress.

There are about 50 nuclear plants operating in the U.S. altogether.

Confidence Conference Cancelled

PARIS (CP) — The Quebec government representative in Paris belatedly cancelled plans Wednesday for an elaborate news conference aimed at restoring French and European confidence in the Summer Olympics at Montreal.

Two days after Municipal Affairs Minister Victor Goldblum jetted to Paris, the society's annual meeting that the effectiveness of existing methods for cleaning up spilled oil and even for stopping an oil well blowout, would be limited by conditions in the area.

No reason was given. However, Goldblum had indicated in Montreal that most of the media would be represented at Innsbruck — site of the Winter Olympics — and he felt he could deliver his message there. However, he did not rule out the possibility of a trip to Paris or London altogether.

The first step in dealing

with a blowout in southern areas is to drill a relief well — a separate well which goes at an angle into the oil pool from which oil is escaping.

Under normal conditions this might take about a month but in the Beaufort Sea this would be impossible before the summer of 1977 if the blowout occurred in the fall of 1976, he said.

In the meantime, tens of thousands of barrels of oil would have escaped, much of it gathering under ice in the Beaufort Sea.

Dr. David Lane, an aquatic biologist with the federal environment department in Edmonton, told the society's annual meeting that the effectiveness of existing methods for cleaning up spilled oil and even for stopping an oil well blowout, would be limited by as 15 per cent of the entire Beaufort Sea population.

If a relief well were not successfully drilled in 1977 then nesting birds would also be affected.

Dr. Lane told the conference the odds are 3,300 to 1 against an oil well blowout but he said in a later interview that this is based on an average for oil well drilling in the entire world.

But he predicted the odds against a blowout in the Beaufort Sea would be considerably lower because it is an area of high underground pressures.

Guard Fired

One Wilkinson Road jail guard has been fired, a second suspended without pay for 30 days and a third reprimanded, John Ekstedt, acting deputy minister of corrections announced today.

Ekstedt said the disciplinary action came as a result of an inquiry held Dec. 23 into the mass break out of 10 inmates from the provincial jail Dec. 16.

He declined to release the names of the guards, but said the inquiry showed that "in this incident the employees failed to perform their duties appropriately."

He said damage caused by the inmates, who pushed open two bars in the east wing remand dayroom, has been repaired and that internal procedures have been strengthened to prevent any further similar incidents.

Nine of the 10 escapees were arrested by police in Victoria, Saanich, and Parksville within 40 hours of the prison break, the largest in Victoria's history.

The lone inmate who still remains at large is Peter George MacLean, 24, generally considered by police as the least dangerous of the escapees.

The day after the escape three guards were immediately suspended with pay pending a hearing. They were temporarily reinstated the week before Christmas.

Hai McGillivray, director of corrections on Vancouver Island, said there had been a power failure in the east wing during the escape. It was suspected, though never publicly announced, the inmates had caused the failure by shoving a wet rag into a light socket.

Oliver: Beast Or Man?

NEW YORK (AP) — Oliver has a bald pate even though he's supposed to be only seven years old, and sharp pointed ears like Mr. Spock of TV fame.

He's hairy all over, but more hairy on his arms and legs than on his body. He stands erect, and usually wears a grim expression.

At least, that's what Oliver looks like in the picture released here Wednesday by Manhattan lawyer Michael Miller, who says he purchased the "very strange-looking creature" for $8,000 from an unidentified animal act in an unidentified area in northern New York state.

Miller said he plans to have Oliver put through various tests to determine whether he is an ape or a man-like creature — or even a young Sasquatch.

Miller says he doesn't think Oliver is a Sasquatch, but that if he should turn out to be, his $8,000 would turn out to be a pretty good investment.

He reports that Oliver is four feet, six inches tall, weighs about 120 pounds, and likes fruit, vegetables, cheese and non-fatty meats.

Oliver never walks on all fours, Miller says, and if he sees people sitting and talking, he may pull up a chair and sit down.

But he doesn't join in the conversation, Miller said. He just warbles

OUELLET GOES TO COURT

MONTREAL (CP) — The lawyer for Consumer Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet presented three motions today challenging the legality of a Quebec Superior Court hearing called to show why the minister should not be held in contempt of court.

Mr. Ouellet was ordered to appear in court to explain remarks he made about a Dec. 19 verdict by Mr. Justice Kenneth Mackay acquitting three sugar refiners on charges of price-fixing.

As the 36-year-old federal minister sat quietly in the crowded downtown courtroom, Mr. Justice Mackay announced he was deferring his jurisdiction in the case to Mr. Justice James K. Hugessen.

At the request of Mr. Justice Hugessen, Mr. Ouellet then sat next to his lawyer, Gerard Lapointe, who presented the three motions challenging the legality of the proceedings.

Mr. Lapointe said he questioned the right of Mr. Justice Hugessen to hear the case in light of the fact that the judge acted as counsel for St. Lawrence Sugar Co. in a 1968 price-fixing case.

Other acquaintances said Mrs. Young was a very pleasant woman and the last person they expected to be involved in a brutal murder.

Police said an autopsy will be completed early today to determine the exact cause of death. There is no indication of sexual attack, an officer said.

North Van. Woman Slain by Sadists?

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman found murdered on the floor of her handicraft shop Wednesday had been gagged and held by one or more persons while she received multiple stab wounds to her throat, police say.

Brenda Young, 38, was found lying in a pool of blood at the back of her shop by Harry O'Day, owner of the book store next door.

"The motive is possibly robbery but there may be other side motives," said RCMP

Staff-Sgt. Fred Bodnaruk, in charge of the investigation. "Maybe sadism."

From the manner of the attack it could be sadistic.

"She was contained by one or more persons and gagged," he said.

There were no signs of a struggle within the tiny cedar shop which specialized in local and imported crafts.

Police were sifting through the store's merchandise searching for a murder weapon on which Bodnaruk said is likely a very sharp knife.

Her husband phoned and asked me if there was any suspicion and called on people who noticed anything suspicious at the shop around mid-day, the estimated time of death, to come forward.

"She was gagged, lying in a pool of blood. There was no robbery."

"She was very nice, very pleasant. She was not a bizarre character or far-out."

"Brenda, for God's sake, why pick on her," O'Day said.

Mrs. Young and her husband operated an import business, often travelling to Guatemala and Mexico to make purchases, O'Day said. They opened the store on Lonsdale three years ago.

Mrs. Young lived in Deep Cove with her husband, a former newspaper reporter, and their four children — teenagers Heather, Jennifer and Tom and 10-year-old Sheila.

Other acquaintances said Mrs. Young was a very pleasant woman and the last person they expected to be involved in a brutal murder.

Police said an autopsy will be completed early today to determine the exact cause of death. There is no indication of sexual attack, an officer said.

Chou En-lai Death Reported

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese news agency Thursday reported the death of Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-lai, who has been in hospital with a heart ailment.

The U.S. state department in Washington confirmed Chou's death.

The Japanese news agency, which monitors Communist broadcasts in Asia, said the announcement was made by the official Hsinhua Chinese news agency.

Chou was either 77 or 78: The exact date of his birth was not known.

Reuters news agency said in Washington its monitor on an official Chinese radio broadcast from Peking gave the cause of death as cancer.

The Tokyo monitoring was made by Radio Press which said the death was announced by Hsinhua in a Chinese language broadcast. An English-language broadcast did not mention Chou's death.

Although Chou did not see President Ford on his visit to China in December, he had talked in the hospital with other foreign leaders visiting the country during the last year and a half.

which way it will co-ordinate themselves with that law."

He suggested that teachers and trustees would have to work it out themselves and emphasized that if the teachers do get the pay hike, it will simply have to be rolled back.

Teachers are legally correct in saying they should receive the pay hikes already granted by arbitration boards but those increases are contrary to the federal guidelines and the federal law must be followed.

"The teachers will not be an exception to the national guideline ... I think they understand that," he said.

But McGeer did not say what method he plans to use to enforce his decision in light of provincial legislation which says the teachers must begin receiving the new arbitration awards in January.

"The exact form that legislation will take is not clear. There is a federal law and the provinces will have to decide whether to accept it or not.

McGeer said he hopes both school boards and provincial departments of education adhere to "their own Public Schools Act" until the questions surrounding the federal guidelines are cleared up.

"It's all talking to the wind, until the anti-inflation board rules on exactly what the

The provincial cabinet met this afternoon to decide the fate of Autoplan premium increases.

ICBC president Pat McGeer said cabinet would be presented with two or three new options designed to soften the blow of previously announced premium increases ranging as high as 200 per cent.

He said it would be up to cabinet to decide what route to take. He would not be making any specific recommendations. And he said cabinet might not come up with a final decision today.

McGeer, who flew back to Vancouver from a brief vacation in Hawaii, told a news conference Wednesday that if one of his new proposals is accepted "there may be a 10-to-20-per-cent reduction in the proposed rate structure."

The minister acknowledged that new proposals were being made because of the public response to a cabinet decision to increase ICBC premiums by 110 per cent on top of the 19.7-per-cent rate increase approved by the previous NDP administration.

The increase announced Friday would mean an across-the-board increase for the average B.C. motor vehicle owner — private and commercial alike — of between two and 2½ times the rates paid for basic coverage in 1975.

McGeer said the provincial government was attempting to alleviate the rate increase by putting forward proposals to the chartered banks in B.C. for an instalment payment plan for 1976.

The said the ICBC board of directors met Wednesday with representatives of the chartered banks to outline the proposals and was waiting for bids to be made. He agreed that the bank presenting the bid would have a captive market if the instalment payment plan is used.

McGeer said he was optimistic such a plan could be implemented outside the offices of ICBC and noted "the insurance corporation has no administrative mechanism by which it could run such a plan on its own. Therefore it will require the co-operation of the banks and other credit agencies in British Columbia."

OLYMPICS BACKS BANNED DRUG

MONTREAL (CP) — The Olympic Organizing Committee has endorsed a cold treatment which contains a drug banned by the International Olympic Committee because it is considered a stimulant.

Dr. Ted Percy, chief medical officer of the Canadian Olympic Association, said Tuesday Coricidin D, which is produced by Schering Corp. Ltd., contains a phenylephrine compound under the ban. He called it "an incredible situation."

Joan Wenzel, one of Canada's outstanding middle-distance sprinters, was banned for life from international competition because she consumed a pill with the compound sympathomimetic amines prior to running in an event at the Pan-American Games in Mexico last October.

Coricidin D is a product officially endorsed by the organizing committee, with billboards and advertisements containing the Olympic symbol and the words:

"Official supplier to the 1976 Olympic Games." "Special Quebec tax planned to pay for Olympics. See Page 2."

The New Year's turkey is just another notch in your belt now. But across the ocean there are children who would have feasted on what you scraped into the garbage.

In Bangladesh, elsewhere in Asia and in parts of Africa hunger slips into their huts every day of the year. The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada tries to meet it at least with a cup of milk.

And once again, through the generosity of residents in the Capital district, the annual campaign of the USC here is on the verge of success.

The target is $25,000 and donations now total $21,381, the equal of last year's record campaign.

Everybody worries about money. But fretting about where the cash is coming from for car insurance just doesn't seem to rank with a child's need for milk.

OLD BUILDINGS CONDEMNED

$1M for 'Sweatshop' Yard

Working conditions reminiscent of Industrial Revolution's sweatshops will soon be over for employees in the city of Victoria public works yard at Garbally Road.

The public works committee today recommended new facilities be built at a cost of nearly $1 million, after hearing that some of the present buildings in the yard date back to 1914 and have been condemned by the Workers' Compensation Board.

The new facilities will include almost 100 per cent more vehicle space for serving and maintenance, new workshops for sheet metal and welding, painting and carpentry, lunch room and shower and locker amenities.

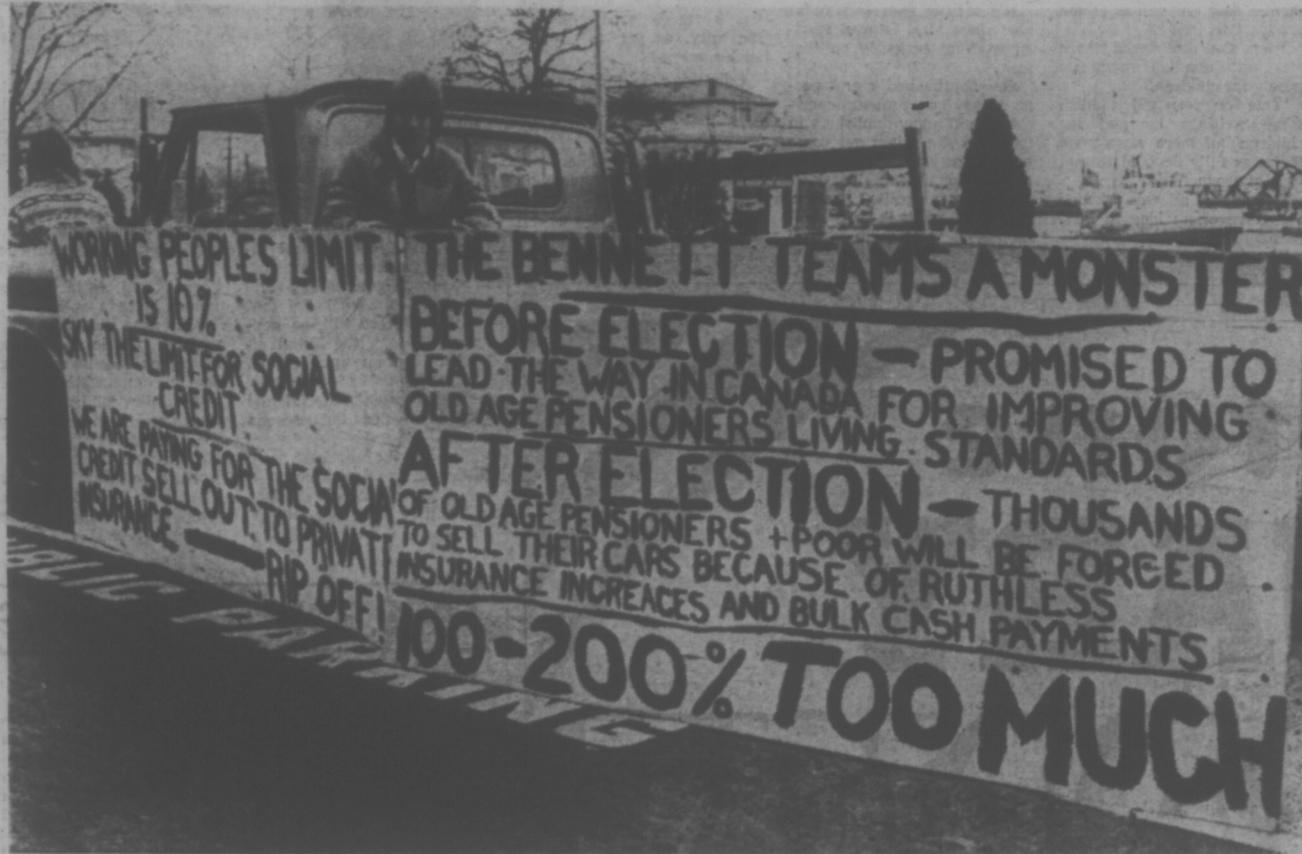

City engineer John Sansom told aldermen the present buildings are so inadequate that even employees who work in the sewers are not able to shower and change before going home.

He showed a number of slides of grimy, cluttered workshops with bad lighting and inadequate ventilation, including a blacksmith's shop of 1914 vintage and "the original horse barn" first used by the city.

On one slide, showing a venerable belt drive for a lathe, Sansom said "Ainslie Helmcken (the city archivist) will have his eye on that."

The committee was told that if the new workshop complex had been built more than three years ago as originally proposed, there would have been a cost saving of more than $300,000. But city manager Jim Bramley noted that the original allocation had been channeled to other projects which, if delayed, would also now be more expensive.

The committee decided to recommend the expenditure out of the tax safe funds account and to call for tenders.

ONE-MAN BATTLE against hike in ICBC rates is waged by boilermaker apprentice Al Sutton who parked his truck outside the Legislative Buildings today and posted signs claiming the increases are a ripoff. He said a "businessmen's government" like Social Credit should be able to make ICBC work without large rate increases. (John McKay photo)

New Lampson School Proposal At Talks with Parents Tonight

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

School board officials will present a new proposal for the future of Lampson Street elementary school at a special meeting with parents tonight.

The proposal, to come from school board chairman Bill Ross, is designed as an alternative to a controversial earlier plan to make Lampson a primary school and reroute intermediate grades to neighboring schools.

A similar reaction is expected tonight, says parents' auxiliary spokesman Sheila Vradenburg.

Ross said the proposal will be discussed along with the general principle of the board being much more flexible with the grade organization of schools.

He said parents seem to agree the board should implement economies, but there is a reluctance to change appearing at the meetings.

Proposal to divert students to a variety of schools including the secondary school would mean costly renovations would not be necessary at the present Lampson site.

Indications are the new plan will involve Vic West, Rockheights, Macaulay, Highrock schools and Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

Said parents are angry their small neighborhood school would be closed.

School board officials have forecast declining enrolment for both Lampson and Tillicum schools from 539 to 385 pupils in 1979, for Lampson and 524 in 1969 to 391 in 1975, for Tillicum a trend expected to continue.

But Mrs. Vradenburg says the board "hasn't done its homework" and no survey of pre-school aged children has been conducted in Lampson area to back up those predictions.

Magazine Suspends Publication

Gene Miller, publisher of Monday, said today the weekly newspaper is going through a "reorganization" over the next two or three weeks and he is searching for more financial backing.

Last edition, the 26th, appeared Dec. 22 and Miller said publication would not resume "until we've got a number of things straightened away, including money and a much stronger advertising staff." Staff at the paper numbers about 12.

Monday, which described itself as a weekly magazine on newsprint offering a more personal perspective on local issues, events and people, had a circulation of about 20,000. It sold for 25 cents but most copies were home-delivered free by mail.

"If readership was the key to success, we're in fine shape," Miller said. But he added that unless the paper can find enough capital, it can't continue.

"What I'm doing is finding investors, large and small, on a day-to-day basis."

Monday was launched last summer with the financial backing of three local businessmen, including former Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen. Miller declined to name the other two, saying he believes they don't want publicity.

The admiral said he hopes

Artifacts To Be Given Away

The Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will receive a name board and a control wheel from the submarine HMCS Rainbow, which was decommissioned Dec. 31, 1974.

The corps is named after the Apollo cruiser, HMCS Rainbow, which was commissioned on Aug. 4, 1910, becoming the first vessel in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Ree-Admiral Andrew Collier received the go-ahead from Ottawa this week to dispose of some of the submarine's artifacts.

The B.C. Maritime Museum in Bastion Square will receive the ship's battle honors board, the ship's bell, a periscope and a depth gauge.

Vancouver's Maritime Museum will be given a periscope and depth gauge.

A search periscope and control wheel will go to the officers' mess at CFB Esquimalt while the museum, one handling the shore-based malms and pumps and the other the underwater pipe which will disperse the sewage over a mile offshore.

Last month Victoria members on the board urged appointment of a single prime consultant. Wednesday the board's public works committee responded by suggesting the board hire its own engineers to oversee construction while retaining the two firms.

The matter was tabled for three weeks while the committee takes another look.

The Clover Point outfall has been in the talking and planning stage four years while five million gallons of raw sewage has been dumped daily at tideline. The present outfall has been operating since 1884.

The project was delayed over the past year while Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay worked out a complicated formula for sharing the cost. It is sewage from these three municipalities which will be handled by the system.

The outfall will not only handle the five million gallons a day now discharged at Clover Point but another four million dumped near shore at McMicking Point in Oak Bay.

A similar 6,000-foot outfall at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt went into operation over four years ago and has

Early Warning System Urged On Escapes

FOSTER

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

An early warning system to alert nearby residents of William Head prison escapes was proposed today by the head of the RCMP Colwood detachment.

Staff-Sgt. Ted Foster said in an interview he intends to call a meeting of residents to see if such a system could be developed.

His proposal would involve setting up a telephone network on which residents would call neighbors when there was an escape from the medium-security institution.

Foster's proposal comes in the wake of the escape of a 28-year-old convicted rapist, Harry Ronald Fugard, who apparently swam to freedom Tuesday night. Fugard, considered by police as potentially dangerous, remains at large.

Foster said that in recent months he has received an increasing number of calls from residents alarmed by the frequency rate of escape from the prison.

Although Fugard was the first inmate to flee this year, there were seven such incidents last year, a police spokesman noted. One involved a Metchosin couple held captive, at knife point, by an escapee for more than six hours.

Foster said one woman, who lives alone raising sheep on a small farm on Rocky Point Road, was so upset that even though it is lambing time she is afraid to go out to the barn at night.

The ratepayers' group in Metchosin and William Head have long pressed the federal government for greater security at the institution and a warning system which would let residents know when there is an escape.

Last year, when the prison was reclassified from minimum to medium-security status, additional fencing, sentinel stations and lighting were installed. But no warning system.

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, said today his group has appealed to the solicitor-general "at least 10 times" asking for such a system. Each time the request has been denied.

"The reason they have given is they couldn't do that because it might upset the prisoners," Waterman said.

He welcomed Foster's proposal and said it would be supported by all the residents in the area. However, he didn't feel it would be enough.

The problem, he said, is the officials at William Head don't always notify the RCMP the moment a prisoner goes missing.

"I know of cases where an inmate has been out for at least 48 hours and the police weren't even advised," he asserted.

In the case of Fugard's escape, RCMP weren't contacted until 10:30 p.m., a half-hour after guards had first found him missing from a routine count.

"A half-hour is just too damn long," Waterman lamented. "We want to know immediately it happens."

Meanwhile, a Canada-wide warrant has been issued for the arrest of Fugard who was serving eight years for rape, possession of stolen property, escape and four break-ins committed in West Vancouver in the fall of 1972.

Police officials with tracking dogs searched the shoreline opposite the medium-security institution Wednesday morning but failed to pick up any trace of the fugitive.

A police spokesman said there were no break-ins in the area but there was a report of a truck stolen overnight in the vicinity of the prison. It was recovered about four miles away near Casa Linda Motel in Colwood. The spokesman said finger-print smears were taken and will be matched against Fugard's prints on record. However, he added, he was doubtful there was any tie-in between the theft of the vehicle and the escape.

"Our investigation indicates there was probably help on the other side of the fence," he said.

Police are unsure if Fugard is still on the Island or was able to get off. The spokesman conceded it was entirely possible the escapee made the last ferry to the mainland Tuesday.

Although born and raised in Ontario, Fugard has a brother living in Vancouver. Police are keeping a careful watch in both places.

Art Gallery Needs $150,000 To Release Government Grants

A $150,000 fund-raising campaign is under way to help pay for expansion of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery on Moss Street.

Director Roger Boulet hopes the community will contribute that amount so the gallery can take advantage of federal and provincial funding.

Expansion costs are estimated at $650,000 and if the community can come up with $150,000 by the Feb. 1 deadline, the senior levels of government will finance the rest.

Boulet said federal government's National Museum Corporation has agreed to inject $285,000 into the project and the provincial government will finance one-third of the cost under the Community Recreation Fund, if the application is made by Feb. 1.

Almost $20,000 has already been collected through private contributions, he said, and "if worst comes to worst" the gallery will schedule fund-raising events.

"But I refuse to believe the public will not back their gallery. It's a golden opportunity. For every $1 contributed by the community, the provincial and federal governments contribute $5," said Boulet.

Expansion would almost double the gallery, adding space to the three sides of the building to provide extra display and storage space, a separate room for film presentations and lectures and better washroom facilities.

Application forms for the federal guaranteed income supplement to the old age pensioners will be in the mail to all senior citizens by Jan. 15.

A spokesman for the health and welfare department said the forms are usually in the mail by year end, but this year there was a delay in printing and delivery.

Directors showed themselves in an austerity mood on more than engineering costs Wednesday. They rejected a recommendation from the public works committee that additional space be rented for the building inspection office at Langford.

The committee had given no reason for needing the extra room for a staff of about 11.

At the start of the meeting, Jim Campbell, director from the Outer Gulf Islands, was re-elected to a fourth term as chairman and Esquimalt Mayor Art Young was re-elected chairman of the regional hospital board. There were no other nominations for either post.

The board authorized Campbell to seek a clear statement from the provincial government on its intentions to have federal anti-inflation guidelines apply to regional districts.

Clover Pt. Sewer Outfall Delayed Again

Construction of a 6,400-foot sewage outfall at Clover Point was delayed once again Wednesday when the Capital Regional Board decided to take another look at engineering arrangements.

With planning almost complete for the project and cost estimates now at about $8 million, regional directors balked at the suggestion of employing a third set of engineers to oversee construction.

Engineering costs to date stand at about $412,000, the board was told.

Two firms, Ker, Priestman and Associates Ltd. and Associated Engineering Services Ltd., have been sharing design work, one handling the shore-based mains and pumps and the other the underwater pipe which will disperse the sewage over a mile offshore.

The B.C. Maritime Museum in Bastion Square will receive the ship's battle honors board, the ship's bell, a periscope and a depth gauge.

Vancouver's Maritime Museum will be given a periscope and depth gauge.

A search periscope and control wheel will go to the officers' mess at CFB Esquimalt while the museum, one handling the shore-based mains and pumps and the other the underwater pipe which will disperse the sewage over a mile offshore.

Last month Victoria members on the board urged appointment of a single prime consultant. Wednesday the board's public works committee responded by suggesting the board hire its own engineers to oversee construction while retaining the two firms.

The matter was tabled for three weeks while the committee takes another look.

The Clover Point outfall has been in the talking and planning stage four years while five million gallons of raw sewage has been dumped daily at tideline. The present outfall has been operating since 1884.

The project was delayed over the past year while Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay worked out a complicated formula for sharing the cost. It is sewage from these three municipalities which will be handled by the system.

The outfall will not only handle the five million gallons a day now discharged at Clover Point but another four million dumped near shore at McMicking Point in Oak Bay.

A similar 6,000-foot outfall at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt went into operation over four years ago and has

OLD BUILDINGS CONDEMNED

$1M for 'Sweatshop' Yard

Working conditions reminiscent of Industrial Revolution sweatshops will soon be over for employees in the city of Victoria public works yard at Garibaldi Road.

The public works committee today recommended new facilities be built at a cost of nearly $1 million, after hearing that some of the present buildings in the yard date back to 1914 and have been condemned by the Workers' Compensation Board.

The new facilities will include almost 100 per cent more vehicle space for servicing and maintenance, new workshops for sheet metal and welding, painting and carpentry, lunch room and shower and locker amenities.

City engineer John Sansom told aldermen the present buildings are so inadequate that even employees who work in the sewers are not able to shower and change before going home.

He showed a number of slides of grimy, cluttered workshops with bad lighting and inadequate ventilation, including a blacksmith's shop of 1914 vintage and "the original horse barn" first used by the city.

On one slide, showing a venerable belt drive for a lathe, Sansom said "Ainslie Helmcken (the city archivist) will have his eye on that."

The committee was told that if the new workshop complex had been built more than three years ago as originally proposed, there would have been a cost saving of more than $300,000. But city manager Jim Bramley noted that the original allocation had been channeled to other projects which, if delayed, would also now be more expensive.

The committee decided to recommend the expenditure out of the tax safe funds account and to call for tenders.

Early Warning System Urged On Escapes

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

An early warning system to alert nearby residents of William Head prison escapes was proposed today by the head of the RCMP Colwood detachment.

Staff-Sgt. Ted Foster said in an interview he intends to call a meeting of residents to see if such a system could be developed.

His proposal would involve setting up a telephone network on which residents would call neighbors when there was an escape from the medium-security institution.

Foster's proposal comes in the wake of the escape of a 28-year-old convicted rapist, Harry Ronald Fugard, who apparently swam to freedom Tuesday night. Fugard, considered by police as potentially dangerous, remained at large.

Foster said that in recent months he has received an increasing number of calls from residents alarmed by the frequency rate of escape from the prison.

Although Fugard was the first inmate to flee this year, there were seven such incidents last year, a police spokesman pointed. One involved a Metchosin couple held captive, at knife point, by an escapee for more than six hours.

Foster said one woman, who lives alone raising sheep on a small farm on Rocky Point Road, was so upset that even though it is lambing time she is afraid to go out to the barn at night.

The ratepayers' groups in Metchosin and William Head have long pressed the federal government for greater security at the institution and a warning system which would let residents know when there is an escape.

Last year, when the prison was reclassified from minimum to medium-security status, additional fencing, sentinel stations and lighting were installed. But no warning system.

John Waterman, president of the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association, said today his group has appealed to the solicitor-general "at least 10 times" asking for such a system. Each time the request has been denied.

"The reason they have given is they couldn't do that because it might upset the prisoners," Waterman said.

He welcomed Foster's proposal and said it would be supported by all the residents in the area. However, he didn't feel it would be enough.

The problem, he said, is the officials at William Head don't always notify the RCMP the moment a prisoner goes missing.

"I know of cases where an inmate has been out for at least 48 hours and the police weren't ever advised," he asserted.

In the case of Fugard's escape, RCMP weren't contacted until 10:30 p.m., a half-hour after guards had first found him missing from a routine head count.

Impounding Fee $18 For One Day

Owners of dogs in Victoria and Oak Bay who have not yet bought 1976 licences are in for a shock if their pets are picked up.

One day's impounding will cost the owner $18 minimum.

The $18 represents $5 for a new licence if the dog is a male or spayed female, $10 impounding fee and $3 for boarding.

If the dog is an unspayed female the price for one day in the pound jumps to $28 because the licence fee is $15, not $5.

Dog-owners in Victoria should have bought the new licence by Jan. 1, Oak Bay's deadline was Jan. 2.

In Saanich, a poundkeeper said dog-owners have been given "a month's grace" and should have their licences by Feb. 1. The fees are the same.

In Esquimalt the deadline is also Feb. 1 but it will cost owners more if their dog is picked up without a licence because the fee is $7 for a male or unspayed female.

Late in 1975 all four core municipalities agreed on new, stiffer impounding fees, designed to cut down on canine repeaters.

The second impoundment costs $15, the third $20, the fourth $25, the fifth $30 and the sixth, $50.

Death Car Driver Negligent

A coroner's jury Wednesday found that a car operated by a juvenile was driven in a criminally negligent manner which resulted in an accident and the death of a passenger, 16-year-old Matthew Riel.

The accident occurred on Sept. 25.

Riel, Malcolm Berge, 14, and the juvenile driver, all lived at the human resources group home at 522 Rupert.

In a statement read to the jury Berge said the car had been driven at speeds of 70 and 80 miles an hour before it swerved off Brookleigh Road, near Elk Lake, and plunged 100 feet down a grassy embankment.

Riel was dead on arrival at Victoria General Hospital at 2:40 a.m.

The juvenile driver received severe leg injuries and is still in hospital.

A police investigation showed that the car had been stolen the previous night from a parking lot at the rear of an apartment at 999 Heywood.

New Lampson School Proposal At Talks with Parents Tonight

By KIT COLLINS

Times Staff

School board officials will present a new proposal for the future of Lampson Street elementary school at a special meeting with parents tonight.

The proposal, to come from school board chairman Bill Ross, is designed as an alternative to a controversial earlier plan to make Lampson a primary school and reroute intermediate grades to neighboring schools.

Indications are the new plan will involve Vic West, Rockheights, Macaulay, Highrock schools and Esquimalt Senior Secondary.

A similar reaction is expected tonight, says parents' auxiliary spokeswoman Sheila Vrdenburgh.

Proposed to divert students to a variety of schools including the secondary school would mean costly renovations would not be necessary at the present Lampson site.

School board officials have forecast declining enrolment for both Lampson and Tillicum schools from 539 to 385 pupils in 1979 for Lampson and 524 in 1969 to 391 in 1975, for Tillicum a trend expected to continue.

But Mrs. Vrdenburgh says the board "hasn't done its homework" and no survey of pre-school aged children has been conducted in Lampson area to back up those predictions.

That increase is sufficient

ROSS
Said parents have contacted the Esquimalt municipal engineer, Mac Campbell and "he predicts an increase of 600 in school-aged children in the municipality."

Shall increase is sufficient to warrant a new school in the north end, she said.

"Trustees are being forced to make a decision on the future of Lampson on poorly researched, inaccurate and incomplete information," said Mrs. Vrdenburgh.

"They're falling into a trap of short-term planning when population in the area is on the upswing."

The school board has to decide the fate of several elementary schools this month and the Lampson meeting is one of several that have been held in the schools concerned during the last week.

A special board meeting has been called for Wednesday to discuss proposals for the schools.

The proposals that have met hefty parent opposition were designed to bypass the need for expensive renovations in some schools by transferring the students to schools where there is extra space.

But Vrdenburgh says neighboring schools — Macaulay, Rockheights and Vic West — have little extra space.

That increase is sufficient

Ask The Times

Q. I love Collie dogs although I've never owned one. Can you tell me where they originated? R.T.

A. The Collie was first bred in Scotland to handle sheep.

Q. I see the term containerization mentioned more and more. Can you tell me something about it? M.B.

A. Containerization is a method of shipping freight by placing it in large containers. It helps prevent damage and reduces time and cost required to load and unload.

The system was developed in the mid-1950s. Piggyback, the transporting of truck trailers on railroad flatcars, was the first widely used method of container shipping.

Our investigation indicates there was probably help . . . on the other side of the fence," he said.

Police are unsure if Fugard is still on the Island or was able to get off. The spokesman conceded it was entirely possible the escapee made the last ferry to the mainland Tuesday.

Although born and raised in Ontario, Fugard has a brother living in Vancouver. Police are keeping a careful watch in both places.

Art Gallery Needs $150,000 To Release Government Grants

"golden opportunity"

A $150,000 fund-raising campaign is under way to help pay for expansion of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery on Moss Street.

Director Roger Boulet hopes the community will contribute that amount so the gallery can take advantage of federal and provincial funding.

Expansion costs are estimated at $650,000 and if the community can come up with $150,000 by the Feb. 1 deadline, the senior levels of government will finance the rest.

Boulet said federal government's National Museum Corporation has agreed to inject $250,000 into the project and the provincial government will finance one-third of the cost under the Community Recreation Fund, if the application is made by Feb. 1.

Almost $20,000 has already been collected through private contributions, he said, and "if worst comes to worst" the gallery will schedule fund-raising events.

"But I refuse to believe the public will not back their gallery. It's a golden opportunity. For every $1 contributed by the community, the provincial and federal governments contribute $5," said Boulet.

Expansion would almost double the gallery, adding space to the three sides of the building to provide extra display and storage space, a separate room for film presentations and lectures and better washroom facilities.

Artifacts To Be Given Away

The Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will receive a name board and a control wheel from the submarine HMCS Rainbow, which was decommissioned Dec. 31, 1974.

The corps is named after the Apollo cruiser, HMCS Rainbow, which was commissioned on Aug. 4, 1910, becoming the first vessel in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Rear-Admiral Andrew Collier received the go-ahead from Ottawa this week to dispose of some of the submarine's artifacts.

The B.C. Maritime Museum in Bastion Square will receive the ship's battle honors board, the ship's bell, a periscope and a depth gauge.
